AT THE PLAY.

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER, BY TANDEETS.

They cracked the same old chestnuts. They sang the same old airs They sat in ancient costumes On very modern chairs.

While paper snow was falling They cooked green ears of corn. Between the night and morn.

The same old villain plotted, The same old lover sighed. same relentless parent His earnest suit denied.

They wrote in twenty seconds A letter or a will: They waved in air their glasses Yet drank them brimming still.

The thunder lacked an ecno, The moon was pale and weak, And when the ghost was rising The crank gave forth a squeak.

Ah, yes, the same old people, With nothing new to tell!
And yet, I must confess it,
Too soon the curtain fell.

"TO THE UTTERMOST FARTHING."

BY FORRES BELL.

Mr. Dalton, sole lessee and manager of the Imperial Theatre, was leisurely imbibing the morning's news with his coffee, when his eye lighted upon a paragraph which struck his inmost soul with consternation, at the same time forcing upor his notice the ridiculous limitations of the English language. Words were too poor a vehicle for his thoughts at that moment. The strongest language in his by no means limited vocabulary would but feebly meet the present case-and he was miserably conscions of the fact. After some seconds' ab-stracted contemplation of the cup he turned again to the newspaper which had dropped from his hand, and reread the "par." by which he had been reduced, for perhaps the first time in his experience, to utter speechlessness:

"It is with deep regret that we announce the death of Miss Dallas Wynne, the clever young actress. Late last night the body of a woman was discovered floating in that portion of the Regent's Canal which runs at the back of Cornwall Terrace. Life proved to be quite extinct, and the body was subsequently identified as that of Miss Wynne. It is believed that the unfortunate lady must have missed her footing whilst walking on the towing path, and so slipped into the canal. A melancholy interest attaches to the lamentable occurrence from the fact that the principal role in Mr. Harold Vincent's new play, which is down for production at the Imperial Theatre tonight, was to have been created by Miss Wynne on the occasion of her reappearance on the London stage after an absence of more than four years, two of which, it will be remembered, have been spent in Australia. whence she had only recently returned with an exceptionally brilliant reputation for so young an

And for once the colonial enthusiasm had been sensibly directed, reflected Mr. Dalton, balancing his teaspoon on the edge of his cup!

In his leisure moments, the manager occasionally gave himself up to speculation as to whether there could be anything in the climatic conditions of that continent especially favorable to the metamor-phosis of the tenth rate artist (h from England into the genius of the first brilliance beyond the seas. Removed from those conditions, the genius sank again into the tenth rate artist. This might be due to the prejudicial effect of the sea air in crossing but it struck him as regrettable that they could not be prevailed upon to remain where their talents were so justly appreciated, that they would insist upon returning to immolate themselves for the benefit of their unthankful country. But Dallas Wynne-as pretty and dainty a little actress as ever stepped-did not come into that category. There wa in her, and he had taken no small credit to himself for his promptitude in securing the prize. And now fate, the jade, had served him this scurvy

He thought of the understudy to whose share Miss Wynne's part would fall, and he muttered "Fat head!" which was ungallant. It was also unfair, for the understudy was a hardworking little girl and not destitute of intelligence, only her comed; bore the same relation to Dallas Wynne's that stolid sue! pudding bears to the flakiest puff paste.
"Sh'll ruin the show!" and Mr. Dalton groaned aloud as he thought of the play on which he had staked all his hopes and a considerable sum of money. He had been so certain of scoring the success of the season. To be sure, it was unfortunate from a business point of view-that so long an interval as two years had elapsed since Miss Wynne's divorce. To act as a "draw" that sort of ing required to be of recent date, but still her reappearance was invested with a certain piquan from the fact that she had not been seen in La since the day she left England with Herbert Blair, who, whatever his faults, possessed the saving merit, in Mr. Dalton's eyes, of having taught the girl to act. He did not believe it was in the heart of the most obstinately wrong headed audience to remain impervious to the delicious witchery of her comedy acting. There was for her a big future, of that he felt assured-and for him, in the capacity of her exploiter, a big fortune. And now she was dead-and the bubble burst! Dalton was not sto hearted, as human nature goes, and when th poignancy of his own disappointment was past, he would feel a very genuine regret for the fragile, ne little woman, with her pretty, childish waywardness and the large grey eyes which so often belied the lightness of her laugh. But just a resent his mental attitude towards her was that of injured resentment. A life in which he was in-terested should have been more carefully guarded. The accident must have been brought about by some piece of culpable carelessness and argued a most criminal indifference to his interests. Indeed what business had she at all on the towing path of the canal, he questioned in an access of irritation.

It was not a popular resort in a general way, save for bargees and dirty little boys! Mrs. Robert Morton, of Cornwall Terrace, Rearis. Robert morton, or Cornwaii Terrace, Regent's Park, was perhaps the only person who had a shrewd suspicion as to the nature of the "accident," and could, had she been so disposed, have thrown some light upon it, but after a momentary twinge of conscience—which she attributed to a disordered digestion—over the newspaper "par." which had so disturbed Mr. Dalton's equanimity, she dismissed the subject from her thoughts, salv"Yes, mum!"

As the servant led the way to a room at the back of the dimly lighted hall, she paused a moment, holding her breath, a strangely eager look in her eyes. But no sound broke the oppressive stillness which reigned around, and the curious intentness faded from her face.

"What name shall I say, mum?"

Dallas hesitated a moment, but not sufficiently ng to arouse curiosity in the well regulated mind "If you would tell her that a lady would like to speak to her."

A rapid patter of little feet across the room had

The fugitive had not made good his retreat without leaving traces of his presence in the shape of Punchie and a glove which he was vainly striving to fix on Punchie's head at the moment of surprise. Laddie only became aware of this terrible fact when he saw the strange lady suddenly drop on her knees beside Punchie with such a funny little cry. The culprit concealed behind the curtain shivered with apprehension. Mother would come in directly, and if she saw Punchie she would know that he had been downstairs, and judgment swift and unerring would descend upon him for eak to her."

A rapid patter of little feet across the room had ecceded her entrance, but it had passed unnoticed nothing but an old rag, and she would not have table, lifting her eyebrows with insolent significance as she glanced across at the face raised to hers in such humble supplication.

"I should have imagined that it would have been clear even to you that in calling here your conduct is a little unusual. May I inquire the motive of your visit?"

For days Dallas had been turning over in her mind an elaborate little speech in which her request should be clearly embodied. Oh, she would be so sensible, so self-controlled, that she could not be refused a hearing—her request could not be dismissed with contempt. She would show that she was not unfitted for the privilege she craved— she would prove herself worthy of the trust! But the sight of that battered childish treasure on the floor had unnerved her—the contact of the little ragged glove within her closed fingers, the sight of that proud, cold woman, facing her in her statuesque beauty, brought home to her, as nothing else had done, the consequences of her mad deed. In a flash of light she saw the lonely, loveless little life all her well turned phrases were swept away in a passion of aching mother hunger, and for sole answer she threw out her hands, faltering help-

'My child! Give me my child."

A smile of amusement curved Mrs. Morton's thin lips, but it passed unnoticed by the girl, her whole soul intent upon the struggle which lay before her.

"You have been married more than a year, have you not? but I only heard of it quite recently. Then I made up my mind to leave Australia and come to England alone. I said to myself, the child will not be wanted, he will be in their way, and when I reached London I wrote to Rob, begging to be allowed the charge of him. During the last few weeks I have written letter after letter to him and everyone of them has been returned without a single word in replp. Then I thought of you. Your influence with him was always so strong, even in the old days. Now that you were his wife he would listen to you when he would not hear a word from me. And I resolved to come and see you, to implore you to use your influence on my

Mrs. Morton gave an ley little laugh. Really this woman's ideas concerning her position were almost refreshingly artiess. "I think you can scarcely ex-pect to find Mr. Morton desirous of opening a correspondence with you, and for the rest, surely you nust be aware that you have forfeited all claim all rights —."

But the girl turned upon her almost flercely.

"Who spoke of claims—of rights? It was of pity of mercy—that I spoke; I spoke of a woman hun gering for a sight of her child, starving for lack of its love. She flung it aside as a worthless gift, you would say. True, but has she not paid for her wickedness? My God, to stretch out hungry arms yearning for the louch of little fingers—the sound of a baby voice-and to find nothing but empty al-

The last words died away in a wall of pain Mrs. Morton eyed the speaker with cold dislike How unpleasantly theatrical she was! It was such bad form and really it would be very awkward if any of the servants chanced to be in the hall. But Dallas-no more the pretty, thoughtless child irre sponsible as a feather obeying the breath of im-pulse—but a woman, haggard and wild eyed, fighting as for dear life for the boon she craved beyond all else in the world, bent upon breaking down that icy indifference against which her passion spent itself with as little effect as the fretting of the waves against a rock of granite, did not stop to pick her words, pouring them out in a flood of passionate,

It is not as if he were dead. To fold the restless little hands, and lay him away in his tiny coffin might be hard, but not so hard as to think of him alive, not to know whether he is in need of me whether he is in trouble or pain. And to know it is my own mad act that has cut me off from him! I tell you, it is paid for with tears of blood, wrung drop by drop from the heart's core." She caught herself up sharply with an apology for the disparag-ing reflection her words conveyed.

"Oh, forgive me, I know you would care for Rob's child. That you would do your duty by him I do not for a moment doubt, believe me. I know, too, that I am not clever or sensible like you—not so fit, perhaps, to bring up a child. But my baby was such a loving little soul. Rob was his father, but there was nothing of Rob in his nature. He was all - all mine—and he will need love and sympathy You are so strong-you cannot guess what it is to hunger for sunshine, for tenderness, and to be turned empty away." She put up her hand with a sudden movement as if to ease the terrible com think of him here-unloved-perhaps suffering for

How vividly that cold sunless room brought be fore her the chilling misery of her brief married life. It was such a poor little story, sordid and commonplace to a degree. Only the old story of a transient enchantment of one whose every thought word and deed had hitherto been regulated wholly according to the dictates of reason, failing of a sudden under the unconscious spell of a winsome face and pretty, childish wiles-of a duel between head, ably seconded by the advice of his friends, and heart, backed by the special pleading of a pair of haunting grey eyes, dancing with mischievous glee. She was but a child in years and with less than the average child's discretion, urged reason. True, but he was nearly twice her age and would supply the training that she lacked. She was frivolous, and had no conception of the respon-sibilities of life! It was undeniable, but for all that the shallow society with which she mixed was chiefly responsible. Removed from its influence and brought into contact with that of himself and his friends, doubtless she would in time do credit to her enviable position as wife to a rising city morchant. The stage was a questionable training school for a domestic life! Yes, but settled in a good home every woman took to house keeping as a duck to the water. And sweet pouting lips arose before his mind's eye, clinching the argur clusively, if not altogether logically. So h "Ah, you won't refuse to hear me? I will not de-ain you long."

the day. But her triumph was short lived. With the wane of the honeymoon, outraged Reason had Mrs. Morton rested her hand lightly upon the

"it was quite for the best,"

On leaving the theatre after rehearsal on the previous day. Miss Wynne had directed a cabman to drive her to Cornwall Terrace.
"Yes, mum, which house?"

"No house. Put me down at the corner." There was a look of resolution which set strangely upon the delicate, almost babyish features, as she eaned forward in the cab gazing straight before her with unseeing eyes. Over and over in her mind she rehearsed the approaching interview. Over and over again she repeated to herself the argu-ments she would use. And yet there should be less argument than pleading. Her letters had availed her nothing, it was true, but letters were such half heartedadvocat . If need be, she would humble herself to the dust, but she would carry the day. It was her last card, and everythinglife itself—hung upon the issue of the game. Oh, for eloquence to plead her cause! The pretty, laughing lips were firmly set, and the excitement under which she labored brought a vivid spot of color to either cheek and an unnatural brilliance o the grey eyes. The little hands clutched the door before her with a grip of such unconscious door before her with a grip of such unconscious violence that a mark was left upon the delicate flesh. Scarcely waiting for the cab to draw up, she sprang out, and dismissing the man, hastened past the row of houses standing as monuments of solid architecture and irreproachable respecta-

She paused at the far end of the terrace, and pushing back the massive iron gate, stepped up to the front door. The bell pealed grimly resonant through the stillness of the gloomy old house, and through the stillness of the gloomy old house, and as answering footsteps sounded in the paved hall, the slight figure on the doorstep touched her veil nervously. Would she be recognized by the serv-ant who admitted her? A sigh of relief escaped her as she met the biank gaze of a total strange

The downstair regions were forbidden ground to Laddie, but it was so dull shut up in the nursery all slone-nurse liked being in the kitchen bette than the nursery-and he was quite sure mothe was out; he heard the front door bang, and so, the coast being clear, he and Punchie had crept down on tiptoe into the library. Laddie liked the library better than any other room, because he could sit it the window and watch the heavily laden large going past on the canal at the bottom of the gar He would like to know where they came from, and where they were going, but when he asked nurse, she always told him not to bother her Some day there would come by a beautiful barge not coaly and dirty like these, but with beautifu silk sails like the picture in his story book, and there would be a beautiful lady on board who would turn out to be his other mother, for he had another besides the one who lived here, he had heard cook say so to nurse, only he did not think cook wanted him to hear because when he asked her where she was, cook looked cross and rather frightened and said she was dead long ago. The beautiful lady would stop the barge and stretch out her hand and take Punchie and him on board and they would sail away to beautiful places when people were never cross and said, "Don't bother. But Laddie never talked about his fancy. Once he had said something before father and m the "other mother," and they had both been se dreadfully angry that he had never again ventured to speak of her, but he liked to sit in the w with Punchie under one arm and watch for her.

would be but a howling wilderness-something too horrible for contemplation. Why, in all his four short years who had there been but Punchie to whom he could sob out his little overburdened heart when people were crosser than usual!

The pretty lady seemed to like Punchie. She was holding him so tenderly, and though she gave a funny little cooing laugh when she first spied him out, and Laddie was raclined to think it was at the expense of Punchie's nose which had been a los quantity this many a day, it was not at all the of laugh that mother gave when she looked at him. That always made Laddie feel sore and angry. deed, the lady must have taken a great fancy to Punchie, for she bent down and kissed him so lovingly—poor, battered old Punchie! Though his lowner's heart went out to her for this kindly appreciation of his favorites merits, he became rifle anxious lest her partiality should go to the length of appropriating him, and it was a distinct relief when her attention was distracted to the glove on the floor. It was a little thread glove. very full of holes at the tips, and as she pressed it to her lips Laddie was almost certain he saw is The baby figure shrank yet farther behind the cur tain, for his ear caught the rustle of slik along the hall. The stranger's face was in the shadow the failing light revealed only the outline of the girlish form to Mrs. Morton as she entered the room. She advanced a few steps with a certain courteous inquiry written upon her face which plainly demanded an explanation of her visitor's presence, but as the first tremulous accenta of pology fell upon her ear, she drew sharply back, her expression changing to one of chill resentment. Interpreting the sudden movement as a refusal to receive her, the girl stretched out her hands in an urgent appeal.

flown, his defeat was avenged, and his advocates exuited in the discomfiture of his opponent. Herself a child of a popular actress, life to the irresponsible little creature whom Robert Morton had made his wife had been hitherto little more than a fascinating game, in which even her marriage only fligured as an amusing incident. When her husband showed a disposition to turn tutor, she became tricksy as a sprite. Then, as he gave signs of displeasure at the levity of her conduct, she became penitent, but perplexed as to his wishes.

When she heard his plans for her welfare, which primarily demanded the repudiation of all her own friends, and a strict adherence to all his, she grew distressed and tearful, and brought down Robert's resentment upon herself. She did not like his friends—they eyed her with disapproval as the embodinent of Bad Form—and she began to fret and poine for the old free life. Then her mother died, and even as she clung to him for sympathy, Dallas felt that by Robert it was regarded as a fortunate severance of the last link which bound her to the old associations, and the wrong struck root, and rankled in the poor little butterfly brain. Then there were the domestic trials, smid which Dallas floundered helplessly, hopelessly embarrassed by the dense pall of ignorance which obstructed her at every turn. Old Mrs. Morton's life had represented an elaborate system of housekeeping, and her son regarded his wife's ignorance upon the simplest domestic detail as willful stupidity. So hoverwhelmed her with directions, with which he had been previously primed by his friends, and, notably Miss Burfield, who, having herself aspired to Dalias' position, naturally took an interest in the working of Robert's experiment. She was a cever woman and he was but a man, and so it had needed little fluesses to win for herself the post of confidenties, by carefully worded sympathy prudently distilled at first with exhortations to patience. The woman did not live who would not in time learn to do justice to such an e mreat to remove her child from her control. She was not fit to bring up children, and he bitterly rued the day he married her, Robert told her, heaping the fuel on his wrath to stille that still voice in his heart which pleaded for the shrinking ittle figure with its anguished grey eyes.

And in that hour the temptation came, for, as she crouched in a corner of the gloomy room, sobbing hopelessly in her loneliness over the cruel words with which Robert had left her, a visitor was announced. Herbert Blair had come to bid her good bye—he was off on tour to Australia the next day, he told her, looking at the small, indiscrabilized with a dangerous sympathy. There was an old tenderness on his part, dating from the day when they acted together before Dalhas' marriage, and almost before she was aware of it he had draw: the whole story from the desolate little heart.

"Leave it all! Come back to the old life and behappy?" whispered the tempter. And the tear swollen eyes from which all the laughter had been washed, strayed round the room, seeming in its depressing dreariness an emblem of her life—and she thought of the cheery glare of the footlights. She remembered the petty hide bound restrictions of her existence—the wearfsome dinner parties, with the eternal babble strictly confined to provisions and politics—more particularly provision—and memory painted in glowing colors the old Bohemian freedom. The insuperable difficulties attaching to housekeeping towered before her—her-berf merely a buffer for husband and servants—and there sounded in her ears the runging applause of a vrowded house, and the blood went pulsing through her veins. Each biding word, each stinging reproach uttered by her husband atood out the harsher contrasted with the protecting tenderness of the man at her side. She did not love him, no, but he seemed to ofter her love, tenderness—all of which she stood in need. And she listened! In less than a year Dora Burfield had become Mrs. Morton.

Again Dallas caught herself up, anxious to con-

Jess than a year Dora Burfield had become Mrs.
Morton.

Again Dallas caught herself up, anxious to conciliate her impassive listener.

"You must not think that I am blaming Rob for what is past. I was such a stilly kind of wife, and I quet have been a terrible trial to him. It was not his fault that he could not understand how hard it all was to me. But I think he would have been more patent if he could have guessed. I know it sounds weak and silly, but do you know I have sat and cried over the furniture because it depressed me so. Rob called it gross ingratitude for a good home. That was just Ut, I think—it was so much too good. I could have done with a little less goodness and a little more beauty. And then therewas the housekeeping—more particularly the dripping and stock," she added, even in that supreme moment recognising the Indicrous side of the situation. "Rob was always coming back from his friends with marvelous tales of what could be done with dripping and stock. It really seemed, according to him, that given those two ingredients, quite an elaborate dinner could be constructed without the addition of anything else, but when I mentioned it to the cooks they became abusive and gave notice. I always think," with an unsteady little laugh. "that dripping and stock really struck the death blow at my married happiness."

Mrs. Morton rested her elbow upon the marble mantelshelf and looked down at Dallas from between her haif closed lids. How painfully frivolous the girl was! "You do not appear to have been troubled with inconvenient qualms concerning yourchild when you deserted your home. Has it taken you two years to remember his existence?" she enquired, with smooth sarcasm.

Again the girl was stung into a sharply uttered retort. "Two years! Not two hours! Heaven knows, I would have turned back then, but it was too late—too late?" she repeated, with a sob in her throat. "Such a short time for a deed to be past recall! And looking back, all the trouble seems so petty, so insignificant, for now I think tha ominously.

"You spoke just now of the child isheriting your nature—your instincts. Surely, if this be unformately the case, the greater argument for a careful training—the more need for a firm hand to approof the weeds ere it be too late."

"But Rob might safely trust him with me. I would be so careful of him. Believe me, I would prove myself worthy of the trust. I feel I could become something better—stronger—with the child's aid."

The grey eyes were fixed upon the woman in whose hands her fate rested with the agonized appeal of a prisoner awaiting sentence. No judge could have been more coldly impassive than Mrs.

I am afraid I really cannot undertake to offer support in this matter. I could not use my tuence with Mr. Morton against my own better udgment, and it does not seem to me that you are it all a fit person to be entrusted with the training at all a fit person to be entrusted with the training of an inmortal soul."

Then she had failed! And until this moment of crushing failure Dallas had not realized how absolutely she had counted upon success. For a moment the ground seemed swept from under her feet. Everything was blotted out—she was wandering in chaos, and ever before her eyes fitted that cold, mocking face hiding from view that other haby one with its sunny curis that she yearned to clasp in her arms. With an effort she recovered in cresif, gasping a little. There was no appeal from the sentence her first hurried glance established that beyond dispute. But she started forward as Mrs. Morton's hand rested upon the bell at her elbow. True, they had denied her bread, but they could not grudge her the crumbs.

"At least, you will persuade Rob to let me see him sometimes—only an occasional glimpse. Oh, he cannot refuse me that. Think of it. lam only begging to share the same privilege as the servants—as the veriest stranger." The little hands outstretched to arrest the summons for the servant trembled pitifully, but not a ray of answering pity shone in the cold steel blue eyes fixed upon her. Mrs. Morton merely drew back a step, sweeping her gown to one side.

"And surely you must be aware that in the world's opinion the very servants, nay, the poorest beggar, is a more fit associate for the child than the mother who has so degraded her womanhood. I must really decline to move in the matter at all. My views on the subject ar: very strong," and again her hand moved towards the bell.

The girl caught her breath sharply, quivering under the cruel thrust. Not even the crumbs then—but at least a drop of water to quench her ourning thirst!

Again she arrested the slim white hand.

"But you will let me see him now—just for a noment—just to hold him in my arms. He shall to know who I am—there shall be nothing to complain of. In the name of pity don't refuse me but "!"

that."

Mrs. Morton rang the bell sharply, and turned upon her visitor with some annoyance.

"It is utterly impossible for me to sanction such a thing without Mr. Morton's knowledge and permission, which I am convinced would be withheld"

The girl looked at her dumbly, a mute, hopeless misery in her eyes. Did God make women like this? As the servant's step sounded in the hall, she turned again to the immovable figure at the dreplace.

"May God forgive you!" she said simply, and qui-tly quitted the room.

Mrs. Morton smoothed down her gown compacently. At last old scores were settled. At last the girl's presumption in having won Robert's love in the past was properly punished.

Her retirement was the signal for the rescue of Punchle's battered person. With his favorite tucked firmly under one arm, Laddie retreated to the window seat, and there, his curly head pressed against the pane, gravely revolved the mystery of the pretty lady. Had she been very naughty, hwondered. He did not know before that grown uncopies were naughty, and had to be punished. What could she have done that they would nearly head the punished what could she have done that they would nearly head the punished what could she have done that they would nearly head to be pretty soor. Carefully unfolding the corner of his pinafore is which Punchle was wrapped, he pressed a farewelkis upon the noseless countenance. He did hope he lady would not mind Punchle's shabby appear ance—and one large tear fell with a spinah on the piace where the nose should have been. But it was carefully dried as he held him at arms' length over the fence, averling his eyes lest at the last moment his resolution should fall him.

"Poor lady!" The childish treble rang out clear and shrill, but it did not reach the slight drooping figure hesitating on the brink of the dark, silent water. What was the pretty lady doing? Laddistood quite motionless, with eyes wide with curjosity, whilst Punchle dangled unheeded over the fence. She had gone into the water—into the cold, black water. Had she gone down to look for mermaids, he wondered? but mermaids would not live in nasty water like that. And the rain nattered down on his head, trickling from his curls, and even Punchle grew dank and draggle tailed without arousing his owner's anxiety, so engrossed wahe with 'watching for the lady's return from the dreary water which had closed over her head.

"Quite characteristic!" murmured Mrs. Robert Morion over the newspaper. "So theatrica!—a mind so terribly ill-regulated." On recalling the details of that interview with the dead girl, she derived indescribable satisfaction from the reflection that in giving utterance to those unpalabable truths she had but acted as the mouthplee of Church and State. Her little world discussed the event in undertones, and decided that it was a most forfunate thing for that nice, sensible woman, Mrs. Morton. The understudy paid the passing tribute of a tear, and congratulated herself upon being so nearly Miss Wynne's figure that the costumes could easily be adapted for her wear.

And Mr. Dalton moaned gently in his coffee cup.

If the little woman could but have managed the ducking, but contrived to steer clear of the catastrophe, it would have been a little tour de force in its way. The kind forbearance of the audience would have been solicited, in consideration of the severe shock she had so recently sustained. Criticism would have been disarmed—all deficiencies overlooked—and an enthus-hastic reception would have been accorded her. His feelings as a manager were so stirred that it was almost beyond his power to restrain a tear of artistic regret over the golden opportunity so recklessly thrown away.

FROM THE MODERN ATHENS.

Old Attractions Continue to Draw Paying

Audiences.
[Special Dispatch to The New York Clipper.] Boston, July 4.—Last night was a "corker" for the few houses now open. At the Bowdom Squate Theatre Bartholomew's Equine Paradox opened a pecial engagement and were awarded enthusias-ic applause by an audience that completely filled ne house....."The Golden Wedding" entered pon its Summer season at the Park Theatre, and the management have no cause to complain of lack of patronage. The house was literally packed.

At the Tremont Theatre the Pauline Hall Co.

began the second week of the Summer season, con-inuing the production of "Amorita," which drew lowded houses last week, and was welcomed last light in the most enthusiastic manner...., Man-iger Keith's Gaiety and Bijou Theatre benefited argely yesterday from the ante-holiday crowd of amusement lovers, and several overflows taxed the capacity of the annex on the main floor and the theatre proper above. The De Bollen Bros. were added to the bill, making a full twenty turn list on the programme. General Manager C. T. Albee is in town, looking after the business conected with the construction of Mr. Keith's ne heatre on Washington and Mason Streets. ... The Palace Theatre and Austin & Stone's Museum were filled to repletion, and patrons at both houses were afforded excellent entertainments.....Man ager George Milbank, of the Palace Theatre, severs his connection with that house 8, and joins Stand's staff at Austin & Stone's Museum.

UNDER THE WHITE TENTS

FROM THE FOREPAUGH SHOWS .- The first disaster of the season, resulting in loss of life, occurred at South Bend, Ind., June 20. A heavy storm and threatening wind induced the management to postpone the performance until its violence should alsate. The audience quietly remained seated. There were few who availed themselves of the invitation to seek sheller in the neighboring houses. Edward Leach, of Philadelphia, who has served in the stage property department of the shows for the past two years, and who was promoted to the charge of the ammunition of the shows, in lifting the Gailing fun from its carriage to place it where it would be safe from rain, accidentally discharged ore of its barrels. His stomach was rent asunder. He walked from the gun, removed his clothing and top books, and redressing himself, was taken to St. Joseph's Hospital. The physician who performed an operation, pronounced the case one past all hope of recovery, the concussion having lacerated the bowels. Mr. Leach Manager anneal the bowels. Mr. Leach hingered min in the cloth, A. M., June 21, when he died Manager anneal the died once and appeared at the Coroner's intendent of the stage properties, returned to South Hend at once, and appeared at the Coroner's inquest, grung all particulars of the accident. His parents, when notified of the fatal result, telegraphed, asking that the body be sent at once to his home at Philadelphia. By orders of General Manager J. T. McCaddon, the body was embalmed, a beautiful casket was purchased, all bills were paid, and the body was shipped by the fastest train to the parents of the deceased. Mr. Leach was very popular among his associates, and as an evidence of his popularity, the employes of the show at once subscribed quite a large sum for the purchase of a monument for deceased. Business, thus far, has been most excellent. Gillette, Ogden & Barker's production of vil726' hispires patriotic appliause and serves to increase the audiences at laight. Billy Burke and brother joined the show at the close of its stay in Chicago. William Ducrow, who was struck by a locomotive and knocked thirty feet, has fully recovered from his accident, and is the first lime in the history of the show that the clo

Notes from Bonhuer Bros.' Show.—At Toronto, S. D. June 25, we had a severe wind sform with heavy rain fall and the tent could hardly stand. The Bonhuer Bros. offered to refund the money paid for admission if the audience would retire, insisting that it was unsafe to try to keep the tent up in such a wind. The people would not leave their seats. In removing a double Baker gasotene lamp from the top of a large wagon Percy Brown was blown off the wagon and refl, turning a complete backward somersant with the lamp in his hand, alighting on his hip on the tongue of the wagon without scriously buring himself.

Boston .- Life is easy just now with our players,

Boston.—Life is easy just now with our players, insomuch as they have very little to do except enjoy their vacation, and revel in the anticipation of good snaps to come. There are very few to be found in town, the great bulk of the unemployed having hied to baunts more consenial than the dusty streets of Boston. From casual inquiry of those in a position to know. I anticipate that next season's theatrical prospectus will pan out as one of the most brilliant yet recorded in our stage ancals, for, I am informe!, bokings of the most attractive sort have been made.

PARK TREATRE.—There is no let up in the drawing power of "The Golden Wedding." Crowded houses have marked the first week of the Summer season here under present management and the demand for seats is strong and steady in advance. Dan Daly, Jennie Yesman. Maude Williams and others in the cast have made suctised commendation. "On the boards come in for mer tade commendation." On the boards come in for mer tade commendation. "On the boards come in first men to the season of the part of Manager Atkins'n. the appearance of Mile, Sozo, danseuse. "Amorita" has decidedly caught the light opera loving public, and will probably run beyond its original four weeks' booking.

GRAND OPERA HOUSE.—That Hoston is to have a first class stock company is a settled fact. Manager Alven H. Dexter sometime ago made up his mind that the "Hub" could, and would support a first class organization of that kind, and the has also been steadily at work perfection that kind, and the has also been steadily at work perfecting the property of the prope

Worcester.—Barnum & Bailey's Circus drew big crowds at both performances June 29. Manager Rock, of the Worcester Theatre, is spending the Summer at Lancaster, Mass. ... At the Front Street Opera House, Happy Dave Holbrook will succeed 8. J. McClosky as stage manager next season ... May Prindle of Lottrop's stock, bas purchased land and is to build an elegant house at Milbury.

ARIETY MINSTRELSY

Notes from Abriur Deming's Minstrels.—
Everything is progressing nicely. Paper is all completed and it is not only expensive, but will prove a decided novelty in lithographic art. The season is booked solid, excepting a few dates during Lent. Sparks and Hiatt, Ulie Stowe, Lorena Jansen, and Harry Meyrick are recent additions. Mr. Deming has just closed a very successful Chicago engagement, and will spend the remainder of the Summer at his home. St. Louis. Mr. De Coursey is wandering among the Thousand Islands, accompanied by his wife, and Mr. Sweet is still busy with costumes. The season will open Aug. 28.

EDITH STELMONT, of Mitchell and Stelmont, is ill at the home of Miss Mitchell, at St. Louis, Mo., where she recently underwent a surgical operation for tumor in the nose.

PROP. S. S. Ballwin, popularly known as the "White Mahatma," is doing quite well abroad, particularly in Great Britain, with his Butterfix Coterie, as he styles his company, of which his wife, Lillie Baldwin, and Ada Delroy, James Bell, Kate Russell and Miss Constance are leading members. He writes that he has discarded all methods of advertising except in newspapers, and grows very enthusiastic over the results. Prof. Baldwin is touring Scotland just now.

Ex-INSPECTOR GRORGE W. DILKS (the elder brother of Mons, La Thorne, the veteran stage manager), and his wife new Williams, will celebrate their golden wedding July II, at their residence 34 West Nith Street, New York City.

CHARLES TENER, late of Carneross Minstrels, is spending the Summer at Tous River, N. J.

O. R. CLOCK was presented by his wife last week with a 10th boy baby. Mother and child are reported to be getting along finely.

by the Summer stock 3. "Oliver Twist" drew well last week.

ON DITS.—Prof. Fred Tworge, one of our local violin soloists and orchestral conductors, who has been prominently identified with music in Pittsburg for more than thirty years, has been engaged to lead the orchestra at the Aivin Theatre next season. L. W. Harr and Michael Erler, who, for several years past have been resident manager and treasurer respectively of Harris Theatre, are taking a vacation for the first time during their connection with that house. They will both return to their posts before the beginning of next season. Don Harris, son of the late P. Harris, is now giving his personal attention to Harris Theatre here.

Reading .- Manager George M. Miller is Reading.—Manager George M. Miller is expending considerable money in renovating the Grand Opera House. The exterior of the theatre has been repainted, and numerous improvements will be usade to the interior.

KERN MUSER.—Many changes will be made to this house before the opening of next season. Galleries will be erected in the curio ball and theatre, and parlor chairs placed in the parquet of the theatre.

THE JULIA JORDAN CONCERT CO. will be at the Neversink Mountain Hotel July 4.

KENTUCKY.

Louisville .- At the Auditorium, Duff's Opera Co. produced "The Pirates of Penzance" the fore part of last week, and "Carmen" the latter half. "Pinafore" will be rendered July 5, 6, to 5, 6 followed by "The Queen's Mate" the balance of the week. Richard D. Car-roll will appear in the latter production. New GEM.—The same people backed for fast week hold over week of 3.

Wheeling .- Immediately after the Fourth, the Wheeling.—Immediately after the Fourth, the annual repainting and renovating will begin. The improvements at both houses promise to be more extensive this season than for a number of years... Your correspondent was one of a large number of local press representatives who enjoyed the hospitality of the directors of the Wheeling Park Association, Jone 26, at that popular resort. The affair was under the direction of Managar Aug. Rolf and Hon. Anten Reynann, and was a most pleasant one. Supt. If C. Weisgerbor took care of the boys on the W and E. G. Motre Line, and after arriving at the Park the day was spent promenating, bowling, etc. A sumptuous supper was spread at a seasonable hour.

Richmond .- Col. Murphy has leased the Rich-Richmond.—Col. Murphy has leased the Richmond Theatre to E. Hamilton Cabill for a term of five years. C. B. Jeforzen, Klaw & Erlanger are associated with Mr. Cabillin the new lease, and are the sureties for the rental, and will thare in the prolat and loss of the enterprise. Improvements will be made during the summer, but will be confined to the stage for the present. The proscenium boxes will be rearranged and handsomely fitted up, the stage deepened and whence, while comfortable dressing rooms will be provided. New scenery will replace the old dilapidated paraphersania, which has been an eye sore to the house's patrons for so many years, and electricity will supplant gas as an illuminator.

THE THEATRE IN AMERICA.

Its Rise and Progress During a Period of 160 Years-A Succinct History of Our Fameus Plays, Players and Playhouses-Opening Bills, Casts of Characters Lives of Distinguished Actors and Actresses, Notable Debuts, Deaths, Fires, Etc., Etc.

Written for The New York Clipper by COL. T. ALLSTON BROWN.

THE NEW LYCEUM THEATRE occupies a lot 50ft. in width on the west side of Fourth Avenue, between Twenty-third and Twentyfourth Streets, adjoining the Academy of Design. In January, 1884, William Y. Mortimer leased the ground to Phillip G. Hubert, Chas. W. Clinton and Michael Brennan for twenty-one years from May 1 of that year, at a yearly rental of $4,000. About a month later it was leased to the Lyceum upon the same terms. The theatre was soon built and was leased to Steele Mackaye and Gustave Frohman for ten years from February, 1885, for $12,000 for the first three years and $15,000 a year for the remaining seven years. As the Lyceum was in debt to different persons for $24,000, it issued bonds for this amount, payable in February, 1891, of $500 each, and executed a mortgage upon the property to secure the indebtedness. John S. Ellis and his wife, Julis L. Ellis, held twenty-four of these bonds. The theatre is three stories high and is of finished brick, with freestone trimmings. It cost $50,000 to build. The main entrance is from the level of the street, in the centre of the building, to the lower lobby, from which, by double stairways, the upper lobby (directly in the rear of the auditorium) is reached. The house consists of a parquet and one gallery, which is entered from the centre. The auditorium is 75ft. deep by 48ft. 6in. wide. 8s; parquet, 344; dress circle, 172; balcony, 123. The greatest number at any performance, 740. The stage is 48ft. 6in. wide, 30ft. deep, and 65ft. high, with a depth underneath of 17ft. The musicians occupied a frame or box on the stage about 5ft. deep and reaching entirely across the stage. They were not visible to the auditors until the double curtains, crossing each other, draped themselves and disclosed the band apparently occupying the whole stage. When the overture was finished the curtains closed again and the frame and the musicians were hoisted on the automatic elevator principle clear into the flies, where the bottom of the car made the top part of the proscenium frame. This car was removed during the Summer of 1886. The initial performance was April 6, 1885, with the first productio fourth Streets, adjoining the Academy of Design In January, 1884, William Y. - De Wolf Hopper and Edna Wallace, a soubrette in Charles Frohman's Stock Company, were married at the residence of the Rev. Dr. McNichol, in Newark, N. J., June 28. Miss Wallace is from San Francisco, and her mother still resides there. Her first appearance as an actress of any note here occurred at the opening of the Empire Theatre, when she made quite a hit as the backwoods soubrette, Wilbur's Ann, in "The Girl I Left Behind Me." When the stock company went to Chicago several weeks ago she went along, but was recently granted a vacation. This is Mr. Hopper's third venture in the matrimonial line. His first wife was his cousin, Neille De Wolf Gardiner. They were divorced, the decree being awarded to her. Later she died, but not before he made his second venture, in 1885, when he married Miss ida Moshier, of Boston, who was in the chorus of the McCall Opera Troupe, of which he was the principal comedian. It is now stated, for the first time, that Mrs. Hopper number two was recently granted a divorce. One of Mr. Hopper's earliest successes was made in a play entitled "One Hundred Wivea."

— The Mabel Paige Co., under the management of Mr. A. Moseley closed a very successful season of forty-four weeks, June 24. The tour included most of the Southern States, also Havana, Cubs. After the closing performances the company were tendered a banquet by the Virginia Wheel Club, of which little Mabel Paige is an honorary member. After the banquet she was escorted to the depot by the club. Mabel Paige, Cora Paige, Amy Paige and Gus Homer went to Philadelphia, and J. C. Rabisch left for Louisville, Ky. F. G. Moorehouse and J. Wyllie Guildtouch will spend the Summer in the mountains of Virginia. Herbert Dilles went to New York and Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Stewart to Lewiston, Maine. The entire company has been re-engaged for next season, with the exception of Mr. and Mrs. Stewart. Their season will open early in August. J. VARIETY and MINSTRELSY

FELIX McGLENNON, the subject of the above sketch one of England's most popular song writers, was born in Glasgow, Scotland, thirty-four years ago. He is of Irish parentage. He began to write songs about ten years ago and since that time has been most prolific in his productions. The songs which have given him the more fame in America are "Comrades," "That is Love," "Oh, What a Difference in the Morning" and "He Never Cares to Wander From His Own Fireside." During his brief sojourn in this country, he has visited some of the principal cities of the United States, and effected a large number of contracts with prominent music publishers for new songs, which will conserve the American idea in popular music. In both this country and in England Mr. McGlennon is regarded as the leading creator of a certain popular style in songs, and his productions are accepted purely for their intrinsic merit. This composer has an agreeable personality and is gifted with a voice of remarkable sweetness. In fact, very few professional singers can equal the author in the rendition of his songs. one of England's most popular song writers, was Notes from Orke & McNair's Voyager Co.: Business along the Kentucky River was good, though we had considerable rain to contend with. Frankfort, Ky., gave us two good houses, while our return date at Carrollton taxed the capacity of our Floating Opera Boat. At Clinchnati we had a new calliope put on our steamer. The Ohio River towns so far have given us good houses. At Point Pleasant, W. Va., we leave the Ohio River, and play the Kenawha River, stopping alst. Albans, Charleston and Connelton, W. Va. Returning from the Kenawha River, stopping alst. Albans, Charleston and Monongahela Rivers. Our roster: W. B. Orke and J. E. McNair, proprietors and managers; Maurice Dolen, advance representative: Albert Marzian, leader of orchestra: Harry Victorelli, stage manager; John Smith, J. Delvecho, Rich Coleman, Lou Campbell, Ellis G. Kerr, W. McNair, Joe Mattingly, Albert Herner, Frank Campbell, Lillian De Young, Clara Meyers, Nellie Hayden, Ida McNair, Frenchy McNair, Laura Eldon, Marea Kerr, and the Cariton Sisters.

WILL H. STANLEY, general manager of the New York Novelty and Specialty Co., sends the following from Okarche, Okl. Ter., under date of June 27: "Last night, after the performance, and as we were all about to retire in our small tents, a heavy windstorm was seen approaching, which finally revolved itself into a cyclone. One of our boys immediately gave the alarm, and, with the women and children, we hastened to a 'dug out.' or cave, as they call them here. We had hardly got into the cave when the storm came on us in all its fury, lasting about an hour, when the rain started and poured down in torrents. When we emerged from the cave we found all our tents blown over and our big top considerable torn. We will, however, show as usual, using only the side walls until we have the top repaired. Otherwise everything is working smoothly and every one is well and happy. The cyclone did considerable damage north of here and also south of us, and, all in all, we were fortunate in having got off as easy as we did. We are anxious to make our next stand, El Reno, as there we will find our CLIPPERS awaiting us."

MAY TREMBLE LAWRENCE

was born in the interior of Kentucky, and made her debut as a serio comic at the age of seventeen. She was married in 1888 to Lawrence Tremble, a wealthy lawyer of Kentucky, who died intestate three months later. The young widow spent two years of quiet home life, but finally decided to again years of quiet home life, but finally decided to again go upon the stage. In 1800 she joined the Ida Siddons Burlesque Co., playing principal boy parts, and making a tour of the Pacific Coast for nine months. After reaching San Prancisco her health began to fall, and she was advised to take a trip abroad. Crossing the continent to New York, she went to Europe, where she remained six months, visiting in that time all its principal cities. Upon returning home she joined the City Club Co. Miss Lawrence is at present playing principal boy parts with the Pay Foster Co., making herself a universal favorite wherever she appears.

NEW YORK CITY.

Last Week's Events .- Although the meteor ological conditions were auspicious during the week ending July 1, the attendance at the theatres, as a rule, was far from large, and had it not been for the non resident contingent, there would have been many a disheartening array of empty seats.
Warned by the existing apathy of local patrons, and dreading the decimating effects of the sultry heat which the advent of the second Summer month renders imminent, several of the managers resolved to withdraw their attractions while yet the retreat could be made without loss of prestige; therefore the lights went out July 1 in three of the leading houses, leaving but three theatres now open on Broadway, two of which, together with the Madison Square and American theatres, the Grand Opera House, the Academy of Music (reopened July 1), and the Lexington Avenue Opera House, are the only houses presenting dramatic or operatic attractions, leaving the balance of the amusement field in this city to the vaudeville houses and the roof gardens, with the exception of Daly's Theatre, where necromancy, as exemplified by Kellar, still holds sway. The number of open houses will be further curtailed within a week, as the Grand Opera House and the Manhattan Opera House will venture but one week of July weather. With so great a diminution of amusement resources good paying business should be the reward of the survivors.....The continued bills for the week July 1), and the Lexington Avenue Opera House. survivors......The continued bills for the week ending July 1 were: "A Trip to Chinatown" at the Madison Square, "Panjandrum" at the Broadway, "The Isie of Champagne" at the Fifth Avenue, "The Prodigal Daughter" at the American, Kellar at Daly's, "The Talisman" at the Manhattan, "Adonis" at the Casino, "Robin Hood" at the Garden and Rice's "1492" at Paimer's, the three houses last named closing upon that date.....The only one week stand closing July 1 was "The House on the Marsh" at the Grand Opera House..... Grand opera in German continued at the Lexing-ton Avenue Opera House. The following works were presented during the week ending July 1: "The Bat," "The Beggar Student," "Gasparone," "Poor Jonathan" and "Boccaccio."......Variety enter-tainment was furnished at Tony Pastor's, Proctor's, Koster & Bial's, the Imperial, London and Miner's Bowery......Hebrew performances were given at the Windsor and Eighth Street Theatres.......A matinee performance of "The Isle of Champagne" was given at the Fifth Avenue Theatre 28 in aid of The Herald's free ice fund.....At the Broadway Theatre, 28, was presented for the first time a re-vised version of "Panjandrum." A number of changes had been made in the work, resulting in considerable improvement. The structure of the considerable improvement. The structure of the story was altered, and many new and entertaining lines were introduced. Mr. Morse contributed three new songs, one of which especially, a "Legend of the Frog," sung by Mr. Hopper, was very succesful. Mr. Hopper makes his entrance in the first act now as a sailor, not as a full fledged matador. He lets the audience into his confidence with a catchy melody, in which he describes himself as a pirate, and his refrain is that there's no place like home. He finds that his sweetheart, Paquita, has been at tracted by the prowess of Diego, a matador, and to regain her affection be determines to fight the buil himself. The result is the same as before, but there is more apparent reason why after his defeat he should take to the sea. Alfred Kiein's part has been entirely recast, and instead of the foppish son of Donna Maria he is now an old shipmate of Pedro. In the last act Rotomago explains that he began his duties as Grand Vizier while a Yankee missionary. Mr. Hopper's new wife occupied a box and was an appreciative auditor......Dr. Carver's play, "The Scout," which was announced for presentation at the ACADEMY OF MUSIC July 1, was not seen upon the ACADEMY OF MUSIC July 1, was not seen upon that date, the opening having been postponed until the national holiday......The fiftieth performance of Rice's Extravaganza, "1492," was given at Palmer's Theatre July 1, and with it the season closed, to be renewed at the same house and with the same company Aug. 14. A pretty book, containing the vocal gems of the work, was distributed as a souvenir.....Seldl's orchestra gave its last concert for this season in the Madison Soulans. last concert for this season in the Madison SQUARE GARDEN AMPHITHEATRE Sunday evening, July 2. The soloists were Julius Gantzberg, tenor; Victor Herbert, 'cellist, and Adam Siefferth, cornettist.

MANAGER J. M. HILL has completed his arrange ments for the Standard Theatre for the coming season. A great portion of the time at this house will be devoted the same as last season, to plays to be presented by Charles Frohman. The first of these will be Sims and Rateigh's new play, "Fanny," which will be produced for the first time Aug. 28, for a brief run of six weeks prior to its road tour. Johnstone Bennett, W. J. Ferguson, Robert Cotton and Elaine Elison will assist in the production. Following this, the first production in America of the successfu London play, "Charley's Aunt," will be given. After the run of this play, another new four act comedy to be presented next season at the Comedy Francaise, Paris, written by Alexandre Bisson, author of "The Masked Ball," and which has been secured for America by Charles Frohman, will be given, with a special cast now being engaged. Manager Hill intends to entirely redecorate the Standard during the Summer, and a number of alterations will be made on the stage as well as in the auditorium.

A. M. Palmer, who is the lessee of Palmer's, the Madison Square and the Garden Theatres, is, it is said, endeavoring to secure a fourth playhouse in this city. It is runored that Daily's Theatre is the one he is anxious to obtain. It is well known that Mr. Daly does not intent to return to this country for a year at least, and as both he and Mr. Palmer are now in London, it seems probable that there may be some such negotiations between them.

one be Is anxious to obtain. It is well knewn that Mr. Daly does not intent to return to this country for a year at least, and as both he and Mr. Paimer are now in London, it seems probable that there may be some such negotiations between them.

Dering the past week a mysterious thief operated very successfully in the dressing rooms of the Casino roof garden. Carl Brosche, the leader of the orchestra, found on June 26 that he was minus his violin, a costly instrument. Mr. Wood missed a cornet the next night and Mr. Sheppard a pair of trousers. His mandolin followed the next day, M. Stretti, the violinist, is another loser.

HRINRICH CONREID arrived June 30 from Hamburg. He has been abroad in search of plays for next season at his irving Place Theatre. Mr. Conreid hark sengaged an entirely new German company for next season to play comedy and drama. There will be twenty-two persons in all in the troupe, among whom are leading strists from the Imperial Comedy Theatre, and the Barnay, Lessing and Residenz Theatres, Berlin; the Court Theatre, Vienna, and the Stadt Theatre, Leipsic. Mr. Conreid further states that he has secured in all sixty-four plays, many of which he will produce next season. He will open with a comedy called "Gross-Stadiut." This will be followed by Sudermann's drama, "Die Heimath," which is said to have been a great success in Germany and Austria. Only two of the glays secured have ever been done here. They are "Little Miss Million" and "The Test Case," adaptations of which were presented last season at Daly's Theatre. On Dec. I the Ferenczy Opera Company will be engaged bere.

The dismissal of the writ of habeas corpus obtained for the release of Charlotte Ewer, held for permitting her daughter Regoloncita to dance at the Broadway Theatre, has been affirmed by the General Term of the Supreme Court. The appeal was on the ground that section 292 of the Penal Code, for a violation of which Mrs. Ewer was held, was unconstitutional. The refusal of the lower court to mandamus the Mayor on application of Mrs. Alice Saunders for a license for her daughter Zelda to act at Falmer's Theatre has been affirmed by the Supreme Court, General Term. The Court finds that the Mayor's power under subdivision 5 of section 292 of the Penal Code only relates to "the musical question." In both decisions the section is found to be constitutional.

The Manhattan Opera House will close July 11, but will reopen with "The Talisman," including the ballet, "Versailies," Aug. 14. The roof garden will remain open. It is hoped that this will procure for "The Talisman" a long run during the coming season, therefore Manager Hammerstein has declined to consummate the arrangement which was about to be concluded between himself and Col. J. Henry Mapleson for a season of opera at the the Manhattan under the latter's management, beginning Oct. 15 and lasting eight weeks, with a return season in the Spring.

J. M. McDosoutgh sailed for Europe June 28. He will remain abroad several months, securing novelities for the proposed Savoy Music Hall, of which he is to have the management. It is said that a syndicate representing upwards of half, a million dollars has been formed, with the object of erecting on Broadway a music hall which shall excel even the great vaudeville palaces of London.

The third annual convention of the Biliposters' Association, of the United States and Canada, will be held in this city July 11, 12.

CHARLES H. HOYT'S "A Temperance Town," will be played for the first time in this city, at the Maison Square Theatre, Sept. 18.

KELLAR still holds the fort at Daly's Theatre, having begun July 3 his seventh week. The discontinuance of the petite comedy affords him an opportunity for exhibiting some additional marvels which, like the rmainder of the performance, are exceedingly mystifying.

"THE TALISMAN," together with the ballet, "Versailles," continues to delight good sized audiences at the Manhattan Opera House. In the roof garden 3 there was no performance because of inclement weather. The bill is unchanged.

"MERICAN THEATEE.—"The Prodigal Daughter" began July 3, the seventh week of its run. In the roof garden, same date, the new comers were: John Kernell, Join W. Ransome and De Rossett and Heath, Margie Cline, Lady Mansell, Lillie Landon, the Belfry Sisters and the Franz Family, remained to contribute to the cito.

KOSTER & BIAL'S.—Ada Lundberg, the recently imported English serio comic, began the last week of her engagement at this popular music hall on on Monday, July 3. She samy some new songs. The other English vocalist, Lothe Collard, did likewise, renderling, by sheedal request, her pretty aftic serenade, "The Troubadear," Charles Hayden rontinues to give his character impersonations with Darked success, and the French sluger, Mile, Juantia Bardoux, remains in substantial favor. Other agreeable features in the olio are the serpentinee dance, executed by pretty and shapely broothy beaming, with novel electric light effects; Parisian dances by Mons, Dafour and Mile, Hartley, and the Borani Gross, aerobats and contortionists. The travesty on Offenbach's opera comique, "La licie Helene," is still potent, Fred Solomon being conspicuous in a the cast through his singing of a new ballad, english with its jinging times and castly melodies. Patronage continues up to the mark, and the effects of the brevial craze for some lines for the present unouth, flarry Conof lag foduced, July HUBER'S PALACE MYSEUM.—Sampson, the strong man, is the chief attraction in the curio hall here this week. His display of muscle and his feats of strength are watched by good sized crowds. Fedora, a snake charmer, new to the town, is also featured on the current bill, and Barney Baldwin, the man with a broken neck, is on exhibition again after a long absence from the metropolis. Others in the freak halls include Oklohoma Bill and May, Lady Laquella, Saunders, Mme. Petty, Sailor Graham and Prof. Frederick. The Atlantic Novelty Co. hold forth on the stage. The volume of business is of such satisfactory proportions that Manager Huber says he feels justified in keeping open throughout the warm weather period.

Rice's "1492" Co., or such members of it as remain in the city, have been invited to visit "The Isle of Champagne." "Panjandrum" and the Casino roof garden during the current week.

IMPERIAL MUSIC HALL—This resort holds the honor of putting forth the only out and out novelty in town for the midsummer holiday week. On Monday night, July 3, an English singing character comedian, named Charles Compton, made his American debut. He came here with flattering credentials from his fellow countrymen, and he was accorded a warm reception. Mr. Compton is a mimic of no mean calibre and while his audiences may be unfamiliar with certain of his imitations, they can hardly fail to appreciate the sincerity and merit of his performances. He portrays with striking fidelity, both in voice and mannerisms, the leading male artists of the English vaudeville stage. As a descriptive singer he is entitled to much praise, and to his other good qualities he adds the charm of originalty. He concludes his number with a whistling song in which the audience are invited to join in the chorus. Mr. Compton made a speech of thanks on his opening night in response to prolonged and hearty recalls. He is booked at the linperial for a season of tweive weeks. Eunice Vance, the other Eng.ish singer at this house, has added a new song to her repertory

The cast included Martin Hayden, Frank Richardson, Walter Hawley, T. J. Langdon, Charles Robinson, George Murray, John F. Birch, James A. Marcus, J. F. Moore, Dave Mordecai, James T. Kelly, Kathryn Ostermann and Lily Sinclair, who all appeared to advantage. The numerous specialties introduced and the capital seenic effects combined to make the representation successful. "Held in Slavery," which opened Aug. 7 last, will close its season 8. In Additional States, and the repulsar Sunday night performances, entertainments were given in the various roof gardens, with the exception of that of the American Theatre, where hereafter no performances will be given on that night. The Seidl orchestra gave the final concert of the season in the amphitheatre of the Madison Square Garden.

from her husband, James Collins, at Chicago, Nov. 26, 1892. The suit was brought in the Superior Court instead of the District Court, and immediate public attention was thus avoided. The suit was referred for trial to a common law judge, who granted the divorce and gave to Miss Wren the custody of her seven year old daughter.

— One of the foremost attractions on the road next season will be "Our Goblins," in which N. C. Goodwin Jr., Francis Wilson, Arthur Dunn, Amy Gordon and other well known entertainers took part in the original cast. The comedy has been purchased by Harry A. Snow and Daniel Stevens and will be directly under their management. It has been rewritten and improved. A strong company has been engaged and there will be a good supply of first class printing. Forty weeks have been booked, the tour embracing a trip to Californis and return through the northwest. The season opens Sept. I. Mr. Snow is located at Chicago with the John Brown-Fort Co. for the Summer.

— "The Power of Woman," d'amatized by Mme. Neuville from one of T. W. Henshaw's stories, will be put forth next season by Augustin Neuville. Special scenery will be carried.

— "Doe" Dammers, of the "Errors" Co., recently received his thirty-second degree in F. & A. M. The degrees were conferred by King Solomon Lodge, of Hoston. W. H. F. — W. S. Bates is making elaborate preparations for the forthcoming productions of "Humpy bumpty" and the new comic pantomime, "Hippo." J. B. Austin is equal owner and manager of the enterprise with Mr. Bates. The people engaged include Jas. R. Adams, the Three Bros. Trover, Lucelle Reed, Mable Rivers, Crawford and De Inze, Becky Taylor, La Parde Troupe of Dancers, Wesson and Smith, the Ravens and Bonnie K. Klobe.

— J. H. Hannigan, business manager of Stetson's "U. T. C." Co. was a CLIPPER visitor July 3. Mr. Hannigan closed with his company at Halifax, N. S., June 28, and passed through town on his way home to Wilmington, Del., where he will greet old acquaintances for the first time in seven years. He has been continuously on the road with L. W. Washburn's attractions during that period, and has been re-engaged as director of his "U. T. C." Co. for next season. The company will renew operations Aug. 23, with a fresh outfit.

— Mabel Craig is playing the soubrette role in support of Bobby Gaylor in "Sport McAllister," and is gaining considerable praise for her clever and conscientious work. She has been conspicuously successful at the California Theatre, San Francisco. An error of the types last week attributed Miss Craig's triumph to another comedicane.

Mr. Robbins is receiving communications in care of The Free Press Printing Co., Detroit, Mich., instead of the former New York address.

— Jessie Mai Hall has been compelled to cancel engagements in New York Boston, Philadelphia and Buffalo, on account of "A Barrel of Money" Co. opening sooner than she expected. Miss Hall has been engaged to play Roxy in the above comedy.

— Maurice Barrymore left this city July 3 for Kansas City, where he will meet the body of his wife, Georgie Drew Barrymore, and accompany it East. He hurried to the city from Pleasure Bay when he received the sad intelligence of her death and met Mrs. John Drew and Sidney Drew, the mother and brother of the dead actress. It has not yet been decided where Mrs. Barrymore will be buried, but it is probable that Philadelphia will be the place of interment, that city having been her mother's home for many years, and being also the place where rests the mortal part of John Drew, her father.

— Harry Clark has signed for the coming season with Aymer & Crandall's Spectacular "U. T. C." Co. He is now with Walter L. Main's Shows.

— W. H. Stewart and his wife, Jeannette Kostelle, last season with the Mabel Plaige Co., are spending their vacation at Mr. Stewart's home, Lewiston, Me. Mr. and Mrs. Stewart were married about two months ago at Paris, Ky.

— The Lyceum Theatre Co., C. W. Stater owner and H. L. Widner manager, will open the season about Aug. 14.

— The contracts for building the new Empire Theatre, at Quincy, Ill., were awarded and signed June 30. The entire cost of the structure will be $50,000, and it is expected that the building will be completed and ready for business Jan. 1, 1894. The officers of the new theatre company are: W. B. Bull, president; Proctor Taylor, vice president; Harry Charles, secretary; W. S. Warfield, treasurer; L. C. Neustadt. 1, H. Lesern, J. Will Gardner, George H. Stahl, W. R. Lockwood, Frank Weems and Anton Biukert, directors.

— Lillian Lewis will next season produce two plays which have made great successes in Germany. They are both by Sudeman and are entitled "ble Ehre" and "ble Heimath"." Miss Lewis has had them translated and adapted under her personal supervision, and will produce them under the titles of "The Tenement Daughter" and "The Wayward Daughter." In addition to these two plays Miss Lewis will also present "Lady Lil," "Credit Lorraine," "Therees Raquin," "A French Marriage" and "The Crust of Fashion." A strong company is being engaged. Arthur Elliot, Geoffrey Stern, Allen Demond and Hugh Gibson are already under contract. Miss Lewis will rehearse and stage the two plays herself.

CARDS.

CARDS.

J. W. T., Denver.—The pot belongs to A. All claim to it was lost by B when he verbaily acknowledged the superiority of his opponent's hand. D. M., Peabody.—W. was wrong in his assertion. The cards have to be cut before the deal. E. G., Auburn.—I he did not care to stay in, he had a right to rake down a part of his blind stakes. J. A. P.—If the player made the discovery of the surplus card prior to picking up or looking at his cards, it was a misdeal; otherwise, his hand was dead.

surpus card, proto opicism gip or looking at ms cards, it was a misdeal; otherwise, his hand was dead.

Jokes, Milwaukee.—It was a false opening, and should be treated as such. D must pay a penalty for his error, and the original pot with D's penalty added, stands to be played for again. Your solution of the trouble was erroneous.

W. K.—The player possessing the requisite number of points and first calling out wins the game. No one point is more solid than another. B wins on his call of cards, according to you statement.

J. E. M.—A wins on his call, provided he had a score sufficient to put him out.

H., Hot Springs.—A was right in his claim. He wins, his ace so determining. The points score in their consecutive order.

JAMAICA PLAIN READER, Boston.—No. B could not increase the numerical value of the pile. A called "nimes," and nine it must remain.

J. A. W., Cleveland.—Yes. Ten is added to the score of the pileyers securing the last trick.

ATHLETIC.

P. W. K., Philadelphia.—Your question was answered in a fformer issue. The Handbook of the Amateur Athletic Union" can be obtained by addressing James E. Sullivan, 241 Broadway, this city.

RING.

W. A. C., Clarinda.—At the time of their fight at New Orleans J. J. Corbett's weight was given as 178h and J. L. Sullivan's as 212th. They weighed in on the afternoon of the day of fighting.
R. T. M., St. Louis.—The fight between Joe Coburn and Mike McCoole, for the championship of America, took place near Charlestown, Cecil Co., Md., May 5, 1863, Coburn winning handily. Jim Cusick and Hen Winkle were Coburn's seconds, those of McCoole being Australian Kelly and Johnny Roche. Kelly is the only one mentioned who is now alive. He resides in New Jersey.

A READER.—John L. Sullivan was born at Boston, Mass., Oct. 15, 1885; Paddy Ryan at Thurlis, Ireland, March 15, 1853, and the fight between him and J. L. Sullivan came off at Mississippi City, Miss., Feb. 7, 1882. At last advices Ryan was a resident of San Francisco, Cal.

T. C.—The maximum limit of lightweight, under the revised rules of the P. R., is 1335. The Queens-berry rules do not provide for a different scale of weights from that governing battles on turf, without cloves without gloves.

W. B. N., New Orleans.—Prof. William Miller, now in Melbourne, Aus., denies that he was ever "bested" in a set to by Jim Corbett.

Reed calls the match off (with Barker) on account of not being able to agree on the date for play. He also thought he had conceded too much to Barker. As a result of the declination Barker says that Reed did not mean business when he first issued the challenge. Hereafter Reed will be compelled to put up a forfeit of $100 when he issues a challenge, or Barker will take no notice of it. It is too bad that these two great players cannot agree, as it would tend to create interest in the game.

Latest Sayings and Doings of the Base-ball Fraternity.

The South Jersey League was organized at a meeting held June 28, at Camden, N. J., of the Camden, Atlantic City and Camden Athletic Clubs. The management of the Cape May Club refused to go into the league if Atlantic City was admitted, go into the league was formed without Cape May. A pennant has been offered the team winning the league championship. Cape May offered to enter any league composed of clubs whose circuit only required one day trips. As the Camden clubs wished Atlantic City in the league Cape May's representatives left the meeting, as it would be impossible for them to make their Atlantic City trip in one day. The clubs will play three games a week, and the schedule is arranged as follows: Camden Club, at home—With Camden Athletic, July 10, 17, 29, Aug. 4, 10, 26; Atlantic City, July 11, 24, 31, Aug. 7, 14, 24. Manager Walter, W. Burnham has been reinstated

Aug. 3, 11, 19.

Manager Waiter W. Burnham has been reinstated in full charge of the Providence Club, of the Eastern League. His dismissal was brought about by the run of ill luck experienced, which caused the team to drop from second place to last position. He asked for a hearing and the directors granted the request. No charges of any definite character the request. No charges of any definite character had been made, and the hearing resulted in a movement for his reinstatement, he agreeing to immediately put the team in satisfactory condition, and expressing full confidence in his ability to accomplish this in a few weeks.

The New York Club has signed Jones, late of the Cincinnati Club, and Davies, of the Cleveland Club. Cincinnati Club, and Davies, of the Cleveland Club. Two games played by the Harrisburg and Danville teams, of the Pennsylvania State League, June 27, at Harrisburg, were marked by effective pitching. The Danville team failed to score a run, while the Harrisburg made only one in the first game, when each had three safe hits, Gagen and Hill being the pitchers. Only five innings were played in the second game, when the Harrisburg won by 4 to 0, the Danville team getting only two of the six safe hits then made.

refused to sign with the Chicago Club this season at a reduced salary.

The Chicago Club was notified by President Young, of the National League and American Association, on June 27, that the Board of Control had heard the testimony in the case of Parrott, the pitcher, now with the Chicago Club, and claimed by the Cincinnati Club, and had decided that as the Cincinnati Club had paid $500 for his release, that club was entitled to said player's services. President Hart, of the Chicago Club, says that he will refuse to abide by the decision and will fight it out in the courts. He claims to have a contract with Parrott and proposes to play him.

It required twelve innings to decide a championship game between the York and Easton teams, of the Pennsylvania State League, June 27. at Easton, Pa., the former then winning by a score of 10 to 9. It was the first of a double programme, the Eastons winning the second by 8 to 3 in five innings.

The second game of the championship series between the Harvard and Yale University teams was played June 27, at New Haven, Ct., the Yale nine then reversing the result of the preceding contest, and winning by a score of 3 to 0. The victors made seven safe hits off J. Highlands, while Harvard made only three hits, including a triple bagger, off Carter. The three winning runs were made in the eighth inning, when Carter led off for Yale with a safe hit, his second of the season. Murphy followed with a single, sending Carter to third. Case hit to the short stop, who threw to the plate to cut off Carter, bet Mason dropped the ball, and Highlands then terrew wildly to second, and two more runs came in. With the exception of this inning, both teams fielded finely. The third and deciding game between the Harvard and Yale University teams was played July 1, at the Polo Grounds, and attracted a large attendance, despite the fact that the prices of admission were doubled on this occasion. The Harvard team took the lead at the outset, held it throughout, and finally won by a score of 6 to 4. Mason led off with a line drive to centre that Bliss misjudged, and he made the circuit of the bases on the hit. Two scratch singles and a base on balls filled the bases in the fourth inning, when, after two men were out, Sullivan hit safely to left field and three runs came in. Errors by Murphy and another drive to centre that Bliss misjudged in the eighth inning helped the Harvard team to their last two runs. Carter pitched in fine form, holding the Harvard team down to six safe hits, of which only two were clean—both being by Sullivan. He struck out thirteen men, including six in succession. Highlands also pitched very effectively, preventing the Yale team from making more than six safe hits, three of which were in the ninth inning. He, however, helped the Yale team to two runs, giving Beali his base on balls in the fourth and ninth innings, when he was brought home by Speer, who twice hit safely after two men were out. Director Talcott, of the New York Club, tele graphed Manager Ward, at Chicago, June 28, that if Anson attempted to put in Pitcher Parrott not to play the game. This was the result of a dispatch from President Young to the effect that the National Board had awarded Parrott to the Cincinnati Club. Talcott said that possibly the games in which Parrott had participated as a member of the Chicago team might be thrown out of the record as illegai. President's Hart's statements that the Chicago Club would not abide by the Board's rulling, and would take the case into the courts for adjustment, has excited considerable adverse comment in local circles. President Byrne, of the Brooklyn Club, when asked for his opinion, said: "I can scarcely believe that President Hart has ever made such seditious remarks. He knows very well that the National Board's decision is final, and that the Chicago Club must abide by it. The case of Parrott was settled on its merits. The Southern League is under the protection of the National Agreement, and the Cincinnati Club, by paying $500 for Parrott's release, abided by the provisions of that agreement to the fullest letter of the law. Soden, Von der Horst and Young, who compose the Board, are the most conscientious men in the National League and American Association, and their decision is a most just one. Hart must have been misquoted."

James A. Hart, president of the Chicago Club, of the National League and American Association, in a recent interview, is quoted as saying: "I shall not give up Parrott to the Cincinnati Club or any one else until the case has been thoroughly heard. I have the gravest and greatest respect for the National Board, but I must, in justice to the Chicago Club, refuse to accept their decision until I have been neard in the case, only one side of which has been presented. They heard what the other side had to say and did not write me to give my evidence at all. I may not have had any evidence, but the Board does not know that fact at all. The truth is that I have e way clear to doing it."

F. A. Abell, treasurer of the Brooklyn Club, in a recent interview is quoted as saying: "I am very much pleased with the showing of the Brooklyns. Any team that can win out after their opponents have made eight runs in the first inning must be playing good ball. This heavy batting is not due so much to the putting back the pitcher five feets si is to the new plate upon which the pitcher is compelled to stand. Under the old rules a pitcher could step from one side of the box to the other to face either a right or left handed hitter, but now he has to stand at a fixed poin" and deliver the ball the same to all batsmen. This is the secret of the heavy batting, I think, and it will be demonstrated later."

Both pitchers were batted freely, but Hemming, except in one inning, kept the hits well scattered and did not give a base on balls. The Bostons bunched five safe hits and scored four runs in the second inning, but failed to make more than one run during the remainder of the contest, and that was in the eighth. After two men were then out McCarthy made a single and scored on a tripie by Nash, the longest hit of the game. Stivetts gave only two bases on balls, but both were in the second inning, when safe hits by Grim and Hemming brought in three runs. A running catch by McCarthy was the fielding feature. Five scratch singles sent in four more runs in the fifth inning and gave the home team a winning lead. Browning made seven clever catches at left field. Nash did wonderful work at third base, being credited with several sensational stops.

Pittsburg vs. Philadelphia.

The fifth game of the series was played June 27, at Philadelphia, the home team then winning for the first time. Terry pitched effectively at critical points, twice blanking the visitors with the bases filled. An error by Bauer gave the Philadelphias two runs in the fifth inning. Three successive two runs in the fifth inning. Three successive singles sent in a run in the sixth. A muff by Van Haltren and three hits helped the visitors to three runs in the niuth. The home team scored six runs off a like number of safe hits in the seventh and ninth innings, two good drives by Beckley bringing in four men. Keefe kept the hits widely scattered, with the exception of these two innings. Sharrott took Keefe's place at the bat in the ninth inning, and made a single. Shugart began the game by a brilliant bit of fielding. A hard hit by Hamilton had knocked him down, but sitting on the ground, he threw the runner out at first. Running catches by Donovan and Boyle, and a one hand stop by the latter, were the fielding features. Hamilton excelled in batting and base running.

The Philadelphias gave the Pittsburgs a decisive defeat when they met again June 28. Killen started in to pitch but was batted out of his position in the second inning, when the visitors made four safe hits, which included triple baggers by Boyle and Carsey. Gastright pitched the game out and was batted safely sixteen times. In the fifth and sixth innings the Philadelphias pounded out twelve runs, the result of twelve safe hits and three bases on balls in succession. The Pittsburgs played poorly in the field, Van Haltren having four costly errors. The Philadelphias fielded fauillessiy, and Carsey was batted only in the sixth inning, when four safe hits helped the home team to four runs. Thompson injured his foot and gave way to Sharrott in the seventh inning.

Cincinnati vs. New York.

The fourth game was played to a finish June 27, the home team then evening up the victories in the series. The Cincinnatis batted Baldwin hard in three innings, nine safe hits then giving them nine three innings, nine safe hits then giving them nine runs and a long lead. Sigsby, the young collegian, then took Baldwin's place as pitcher, and in the seventh inning gave three men bases on balls, which yielded three more runs. Sullivan kept the New Yorks from getting more than seven safe hits, five of which were made in the sixth and eighth innings, and brought in four runs. Sullivan got in a home run by a long hit to left centre in the first inning, and Tiernan h t a timely triple in the eighth. Latham was lame, and gave way to J. Smith in the latter part of the contest.

Lucky hitting by Yaughn helped the Cincinnatis to win June 28, although the game was closely contested for five innings. Canavan laid off on account of the death of his brother, and Vaughn, who filled the vacancy, got a double bagger, brighing in one run after two men were out in the first inning, and a triple bagger sending in three men who filled the bases after two were out in the sixth. A bad miss by Burke brought in the other two runs credited to the home team. The New Yorks batted Dwyer only in the first and fifth innings, when five hits gave them three earned runs. Schmidt was very wild. McPhee accepted all of eleven chances, including no fewer than nine assists.

Cleveland vs. Washington. The fifth game of the series was played June 27, at Cleveland, the home team then winning for the fourth time. Duryea started in to pitch, but was batted out of the pitcher's position in the second inning, the home team having then scored seven runs. Maul, who was then substituted, was more effective, being batted only in two innings. This lead proved sufficient to win, and Clarkson let up at the finish, allowing the visitors to add seven runs to their total. McKean and Larkin each

The skillful and daring one legged 'cyclist whose portrait is given above is a native of Illinois, having been born at Danville in 1866. At the age of eighteen years he had the misfortune to lose his right leg in a railroad accident. Within the past two years he learned to ride the bicycle, and he is now one of the most accomplished trick riders in the country. On April 18, last, he gave a wonderful exhibition of his skill and nerve by riding a safety wheel down the west steps of the Capitol at Washington, D. C., a feat never before attempted even by a blcyclist possessed of two sound legs. The steps are eighty in number, and the distance from top to bottom about 100ft., with a clear descent of a new the steps of the capitol, but the flight is now a professional tick rider, and he finds his new vocascent of about 50ft. The Cincinnatis won a closely contested game July 1, and then exchanged places with the Washingtons in the pennant race. Esper was splendidly supported and kept the home team from scoring arrun after the third inning. Sullivan was also in fine form, being batted only in the ninth, the visitors then scoring three runs and having two men on the bases, when two remarkable caiches by Canavan at left centre terminated the exciting contest. Holliday did the best batting, getting a double and two singles. The weather was threat-

Superior fielding and timely hitting helped the Philadelphias to win June 30, when the game was more closely contested. The fourth inning decided the question of victory, Relily then hitting a high fly to left field which Burkett lost in the sun and two runs came home on the scratch hit, and Allen followed with a home run drive to deep centre, it being one of the longest hits ever made on the local grounds. The four runs thus scored gave the visitors the lead, which they held during the remainder of the contest.

After a hard uphill fight the Cleveland team batted out a victory in the tenth inning July 1. Cuppy was very effective after the first inning, when a base on balls and four safe hits helped the Philadelphias to the lead. The Clevelands batted Carsey hard throughout the contest, but their hits were well scattered except in the eighth inning, when three singles sent in the run that tied the score, and in the tenth, when seven safe hits and a base on balls brought in eight runs, seven of which were earned. Ewing led off with a triple bagger in this tinning, and with the bases tuil McKean drove in three runs by a double bagger. The visitors, who had failed to score from the first inning to the tenth, now managed to get in another run. Zim-mer and Cross led their respective teams in batting, each getting four singles. Both teams fielded sharply, the Philadelphias playing without

Louisville vs. Baltimore

Louisville vs. Baltimore.

The fourth game was played June 29, at Louisville, the home team then scoring their first victory of the series. Hawke was wild and he filled the bases thereby in the third inning, and then three safe nits helped the home team to four runs after two men were out. The lead thus gained proved to be a winning one. The Baltimores batted Stratton freely, but he pitched effectively at critical points. Long and Treadway made remarkable running catches of hits that seemed sure home runs, the latter then completing a brilliant double play by a long throw from the extreme right field end of the grounds.

St. Louis vs. Baltimore.

fourth game between these clubs was played June 27, at St. Louis, Mo., the Baitimores then scor-ing their third victory of the series. Long, late of the Southern League, who made his first appearthe Southern League, who made his first appearance with the Baltimore team on the preceding day, distinguished himself both in batting and fielding. Treadway did the best batting, getting four timely singles. The game was won in the fifth inning, when the Baltimores bunched five singles and scored five runs after Quinn had lost a chance to make an easy double play that would have retired the side. McMahon and Hawley were both batted hard, but the former was splendidly supported. Kelley made a home run in the seventh inning. The St. Louis got in six successive safe hits in the sixth and seventh innings, and earned three runs. Running catches by Long and Treadway were notworthy features, the latter holding the ball, although he fell and rolled over and over.

Decker, who reappeared at second base with the home team, made two errors in the first two innings that proved costly. The visitors then bunched four safe hits, which, with the aid of an error by Dahlen, and a base on balls, brought in six unearned runs. McGinnis was also batted hard in the third inning, when triple baggers by Fuller and Tiernan, and a single by Ward, carned three runs. Rusie was also batted freely, but he kept the hits well scattered, and was better supported, and also more effective at critical stages. The New York team's batting order was altered, and exhibited an improvement. Seward's umpiring was unsatisfactory.

St. Louis vs. Boston.

The Bostons beat the St. Louis team for the ourth successive time June 29, at St. Louis. Bannon, who took Glasscock's place at short stop, had non, who took Glasscock's place at short stop, had how costiy errors in the sixth inning, and the Bostons then bunched three singles, which gave them four runs and the victory. Breitenstein held the champions down to six safe hits, five of which were credited to Duffy and Nash, the last named getting in a timely hit in the sixth, when three men were on bases. Nichols prevented the home team from making more than eight safe hits, which were so cattered as to yield only two runs. A double bage ger by Bannon and a triple by Peltz were the oniy long hits. The Bostons fielded without an error. Long accepted all of nine chances at short stop.

Chicago vs. St. Louis.

The Chicagos scored a well earned victory over the St. Louis team July 2, at Chicago. The victors made only four safe hits off Breitenstein, but three of them were triple baggers and came bunched in two innings, the sixth and seventh, and vielded three runs, two carned. The visitors batted McGill in a lively manner at times, but superior fielding by the home team prevented them from adding runs to their credit. The two runs made by St. Louis were scored in the eighth inning, on two hits and two errors. Bannon's good work at the bat was a feature, he making a safe hit, including a triple bagger, each of the four times he went to the bat. Shugart, late of the Pittsburg Club, made his first appearance with the St. Louis Cleveland vs. Brooklyn.

The Clevelands scored a victory over the Brook-lyns July 3, at Cleveland, in a game that was marked by heavy batting by both teams. Kennedy was taken out at the end of the sixth inning, Foutz taking his place. The latter, too, was freely batted. Although Young was batted hard all through, he pitched until the end of the game. Daly's playpitched until the end of the game. Daily a pay-ing at third base was a feature. In the sixth inn-ing, with two men on the bases, Daly hit the ball-to left field fence—so, hard that it went through the stats and fell on the outside. He scored a home run and sent two runs in ahead of him. Virtue and O'Connor both batted hard for the home team Twice Zimmer and O'Connor made double bagger

St. Louis vs. New York.

The New Yorks were beaten July 3, at St. Louis by the home team only after a stubborn contest, and then by the narrow margin of a single run. Gleason and Baldwin were the opposing pitchers. Both did good work; Gleason receiving by far the better support. The death of Fuller's father called that clever little player to his home in Cincinnati and Keeler took his place at short stop, but his work in that position was poor. Errors by Doyle and Lyons proved costly, and resulted in two runs for the home team. The New Yorks made a fine raily in the eighth and scored three runs, but not enough to even tie the score. Tiernan and Davis did the best batting for the visitors, and Bannon and Brodie for the home team.

The college tournament at Chicago commenced June 26, when the University of Virginia team de-feated the University of Illinois. On the following alternoon the University of Wisconsin defeated feated the University of Illinois. On the following alternoon the University of Wisconsin defeated the Vanderbilt University team. The losers contended June 28, when the University of Illinois won by a scere of 6 to 3, and the winners in the first two games met on the following day, when the University of Virginia proved victorious by 14 to 4. The winner of the third game and loser of fourth game were the contestants June 30, when the University of Illinois won an eleven inning contest by 17 to 10. The Universities of Virginia and Illinois were scheduled to play July 1. By this plan, which is based on the dropping of any team so soon as it has lost two games, a single winner will be left at the end of the week. There is a bare possibility that Saturday's games may leave two teams a tie in their records, and, should such be the case, the lie will be played off during the following week, two games being played each day. Should twelve leams enter, three weeks would be necessary to fluish the list, leaving at the end of that time three teams to contest in the finals. These three teams will then play a series between themselves for the championship and the medals to be awarded to the winners. The prize is a beautiful sliver trophy—a miniature base ball player in uniform, standing on a pedestal and holding above his head with both hands a 1 aseball surmounted by crossed bats and a wreath.

During the Chicago. Brooklyn game of June 26, at Chicago, Dahlen, of the home team, objected to a called strike in the first inning and Seward fined him $10. A few minutes later, after his out at home, Dahlen is alleged to have dashed a handful of dust into the umpire's eyes. Seward used his handkerchief vigorously for a few seconds but said nothing.

During the latter part of the game between Yale and Harvard University teams, July I, at the Polo Grounds, this city, a slight fire occurred in the grand stand, which crated some excitement for a time. The blaze was caused by a lighted cigar or acigarette carelessly thrown into the stand. Police Captain Killilea extinguished the fire, which did only slight damage.

The Norristown team made only one safe hit in seven innings off Cummings, of the Camden team, July 3, at Camden, N. J., the local nine then wining by 10 to 2.

The York and Easton teams, of the Pennsylvania The Tork and Easton leams, of the Pennsylvania State League, played an exciting eleven inning game July 3, at York. The York team won by a score of 7 to 2. Coleman was hit safely twelve times, but kept the visitors down to two runs, which were made in the sixth inning.

The Bostons made only two safe hits off Hutchison in a championship game played July 3, at Chicago.

The fourth game between the rival professional and amateur teams of Camden, N. J., was played July 1, when the amateurs won by a score of 13 to 5. McCoach, the professional pitcher, weakened in the fourth inning, when the amateurs pounded out nine runs.

The Chicagos figured in two championship games July 1 and 2, in each of which the losers made at least twice as many safe hits as the winners. Anson's team failed to make a run off six safe hits while the New Yorks scored one run off only two hits in the first game. This result was reversed in the second game, the Chicago team making three runs off four hits, while the St. Louis scored only two runs although credited with eight safe hits.

The Providence team made only two safe hits off Miller, in a championship game with the Springfields, July 3, at Providence, the visitors then winning by 5 to 0.

July 3, at Far Rockaway, L. 1.

It required eleven innings to decide the game between the Jeansville and Mahanoy City teams July 1, at Mahanoy City, Pa., the former then winning by a score of 4 to 3. The curious feature was the fact that the victors made only two safe hits against seven for the losers. Helser pitched for the home team and Meener for the visitors.

In the championship more than the same seven for the control of the visitors.

In the championship game between the Cincin-nati and Washington teams played July 2, at Cin-cinnati, Holliday, of the home team, made a safe bit each of the five times at bat.

Bannon, of the St. Louis team, in a championship game July 2, at Chicago, made a safe hit, including a triple bagger, each of the four times he went to the bat.

W. H. FOREES, of Boston, Mass., purchased Medder at the dispersal sale of the late George Baird's horses in England, paying $72,500 for him. Meddier is a son of St. Gatien and Busybody, and is as yet undefeated. As a two year old he won the British Dominion stakes, the Chesterfield Stakes and the Dewhurst Plate, valued in all at over $17,000, and the manner in which he won those events caused him to be made a favorite over Isinglass for the Derby, but the sudden death of his owner made his nomination therefor void. St. Gatten ran a dead heat with Harvester for the Derby of Issa, afterwards winning the Cesarewitch in a gallop, while his dam in the same year won the One Thousand Guineas and Oaks.

The Horse and Cattle Show.

Andrew Friedman, as receiver of the Manhattan Athletic Club, obtained an injunction July 1 from Justice Truax, of the Supreme Court, preventing the twelve receivers of the United States Horse and attle Show Society from interfering with the of Manhattan Field race track by the National Cash 'Cycling Association. Under a lease taken by the ociety from the Manhattan Athletic Club the society from the Manhatian Athletic Club the so-ciety agreed to build a club house and grand stand, and on payment of $8,000 a year was to have the grounds for two weeks in the Fall and Spring for shows and joint use of the grounds three days of the week, Monday, Tuesday and Thursday. Counsel for the society contended that Receiver Friedman of the club had usurped the rights of the twelve receivers of the society. Justice Traux said the lease only gives the society the use on the three days mentioned of the inside field, and only for the purpose of exercising horses. The Judge only per-mits such use of the inner field. The liquor license of the club house, which is held by the society, is in the name of the society, and the National Cash 'Cycling Association paid $50 to Secretary Hyde, of the society, for the use of the license at the meet.

Something New in Starting.

A novelty in the shape of a starting machine will be experimented with at Brighton Beach. The apbe experimented with at Brighton Beach. The apparatus, which is the invention of E. Forbes, a well known horse owner, has been erected near the five furlongs pole. It consists of two cast iron columns, one on each side of the track. Near the top of each column is an arm counterbalanced by heavy weights. The points to the arms are connected by a copper wire, on which is fastened a screen of leather lines. A movement of a lever is controlled by the starter, who stands in a starter's box. The two arms are brought down until the dropping screen hangs across the track, with the bottom about four feet from the ground. At a word from the starter the screen is dropped into position. The boys are ordered to line up, and as soon as they are in shape the starter gives the word. The screen is moved away from the horses' heads and above at the same time and the race is on. Should any of the horses refuse to break the flag will not drop, and they will return for a new start.

RUSSELL WILKES, the well known pacer, was struck by lightning at Freeport. Ill., on July 1 and instantly killed. He was the property of John Donovay Jr., of St. Joe. No., had a record of 2:15, and was valued at 330,000.

SHEEPSHEAD BAY RACES.

The Rich Realization Stakes Won by The Sunbeam Colt.

A very good crowd of race goers were at the Sheepshead Bay track June 27, when the Great Trial Stakes were run over the futurity course, and James R. Keene's two colts finished first and sec-ond. The gross value of the stake was $26,475, of which the winner got $23,475. Domino won the race which the winner got $23.476. Domino won the race and Mr. Keene's recent $30,000 purchase, the Glori-anne coit, now called Hyder Abad, ran second, beat-ing the crack Dobbins by four lengths. It was another case of a favorite getting toadly beaten in a big stake race, as the bulk of the money was on Boundless, the Western wonder, who was quoted at 6 to 5. St. Leonards and Sir Walter were also well played. It was a beautiful race and the fastest Realization ever run, the fractional time being 0:27, 0:54, 1:21, 1:47 is, 2:14, 2:39 is and 2:50 is. There was almost as much interest taken in this race as there was in the great Suburban, and the attendance was the largest it has been at any time since the Suburban. The Double Event was the next most important race on the card. Hyder Abad, St. Julien and Jersey Belle were withdrawn, which left Hornpipe, Galillee, J. P. B. and Declare to fight it out. Illusion was added at the last moment. Snapper Garrison lanced Hornpipe a winner by a length and a half. As Hornpipe also won the first event Mr. Keene received $1,000 additional, which made the total amount of the two events $9,000. Summary:

THE NEATLY PRINTED and handsomely bound book of the Monmouth Park Association, containing the nominations to stakes for the season of forty-six days at the sea shore, commencing July 3 and terminating Aug. 24, logether with the daily programme, up to July 19, reflects credit upon Secretary H. G. Crickmore and his assistant, Hugh J. McIntyre, both officials of experience and ability. The added money for the meeting is over $390,000, and there will be six races each day, commencing at 2.30 r. M. The best thoroughbreds from all parts of the country are now quartered at the tract, and it is unecessary after persuing the book to say that the present meeting gives bright promise of fully equaling in attractiveness, as it will dwarf in the matter of events, any held in previous years.

A. M. Wood Makes the Largest Individual Score on Record in America. A. M. Wood, playing for the Pennsylvania Railroad team against the visiting Roanoke (Va.) Club's eleven, on July 3, at Philadelphia, surpassed all previous records in America, by making 27s runs. Wood, whose picture and record appear in THE CLIPPER ANNUAL of 1893, went in at the fall of the third wicket, and in partnership with McClure added 188 runs before the latter was bowled, and added 188 runs before the latter was bowled, and while with Sayers, Wood also hit in the most vigorous manner, and very quickly compiled 278 runs before he retired not out. McClure and Sayers also batted in fine form, and the inning was declared closed after the fail of the fifth wicket. The Roanoke eleven were quickly disposed of for 25, Fearon capturing four wickets for only 7 runs, and McClure six wickets for 17 runs.

The Wanderers opened their new grounds at Chicago June 24, when they were defeated by the visiting Puliman Club, the totals of the first inning being 87 to 42. The chief feature of the contest was the batting of J. Cummings, who made 47 runs in almost faultless style. Rogers captured six of the Wanderers' wickets at the cost of only 18 runs. Kelly performed the "hat" trick in the first inning of the Pullman, capturing three wickets with successive balls and another wicket with the fifth of an over.

TWO CHAMPIONSHIP GAMES were played July 1, at Philadelphia, the Germantown team then reversing the result of their previous game with the Tioga Cub, and the Philadelphia defeating the Belmont Club by the narrow margin of one run. The Germantown scored 234 to the Tioga team's 32, R. Brown scorring 46 for the winners, and Patterson capturing six wickets of the Tioga team at the cost of only 8 runs. The Philadelphia cleven scored 188 in their first luning, and the Belmont team made 187 before the seventh wicket fell. Cowperthwaite then captured the last four wickets in one over for no runs, and the Philadelphias hus won amid great excitement.

THE RING.

Corbett and Mitchell.

It is now a little more than probable that the Coney Island folk who provide fistic amusement for the sport loving portion of this community will slip up in their efforts to secure a star attraction in the shape of a glove fight between Jim Corbett and Charley Mitchell. The managers of the Eastern organization were confident that their offer of a purse of $40,000, made last April and agreed to by the Californian, would prove entirely acceptable to the of $40,000, made last April and agreed to by the Californian, would prove entirely acceptable to the bold Britisher as well, and that no other club would care to tempt the fighters by hanging up a Heber plum. It appears, however, that they builded better than they knew, for on June 30 Dominick O'Malley, the president of the Columbian Athletic Club, of Roby, Ind., induced Corbett to throw up his agreement with the Concept Island people and agree to do battle for the larger amount of $45,000 offered by the Western organization. Here is the agreement stated to have been signed by Corbett:

The undersigned, James J. Corbett, heavy seight champion of the word, agrees to accept a house for a contest to a finish between Charles Mitchell, of London, Eng., and myself, under the conditions hereinafter mentioned, namely: I have signed with the Coney Island club to meet said Mitchell for a purse of $40,000, and in all equity and bonor I consider myself bound to the Coney Island club to meet said Mitchell for a purse of $40,000, and in all equity and bonor I consider myself bound to the Coney Island club, where the conditions are at all equal. However, in the light of the fact that Charles Mitchell shanot yet signed with the club, added to the fact that it requires the signature of both principals to make the match, I agree that if Mitchell with or agree to meet me before the Coney Island Club for the $40,000 creased offering. Further, if the said Mitchell should detault and tail to meet me for the title of heavyweighs champion of the world, I will agree to take on in Mitchell's place Peter Jackson, the battle to take place on the date already set for my contest with Charles Mitchell b. Mitchell's place Peter Jackson, the battle to take piace on the date already set for my contest with Charles Mitchell.

Three hours later the following cablegram was received by President O'Malley in reponse to a dispatch forwarded to London:

Mitchell accepts $45,000 offer. I have signed him with temporary articles of agreement pending the arrival of that. Have posted £500 for you with Atkinson, of Sporting £69.

The Coney Island A. C. Groning Effect with their cherished plans, and should the fight take place elsewhere than at the arena by the sea thousands of sporting men and their imitators will be greviously disappointed; but the principals to the match evidently have the matter at their own disposal, and that they will prefer to face each other under the auspices of the organization that hangs up the biggest prize goes without saying.

The Outlook at New Orleans.

Judging from the following dispatch from the Molasses City the days of giove fighting tournaments at that place are numbered: "The Crescent City Athletic Club, which was an offshot of the Olym-City Athletic Club, which was an offshot of the Olympic Club, will soon go out of existence. Ever since the Fitzsimmons-Hall fight the affairs at the club have been in a bad way. It has become definitely known that Fitzsimmons did not receive anything itke $40,000 for knocking out his old rival. The amount which he got was between $15,000 and $20,000. This information comes from a member of Board of Direct rs of the club and one of the most prominent men in the organization. The club has failed to meet its obligations and is at present engaged in the selection of a plan whereby the club house, which cost $15,000 to fit up, will be turned over to the New Orleans branch of the Elks. The Elks will assume the debts of the club and take possession about the 15th of July if their directors agree to accept the terms. The debts of the organization amount to something like $8,000. Among the largest creditors is Mr. Noel, the president."

An Unsatisfactory Fight.

An Unsatisfactory Fight.

The contest between Charley Johnson and flilly Hawkins before the Twin City Athletic Club, of Minneapolis, Minn., for a $1,000 purse, June 20, ended very unsatisfactorily in the sixth round, tlawkins was the aggressor and did some clever work. He got in clean hits on Johnson's face a number of times with his full strength and twice floored him. Johnson, however, took his blows easily and only laughed. This evidently discouraged Hawkins, and in the sixth round he pulled of his gloves and got outside the ropes. His excuse was that Johnson fouled him by hugging. The referred decided that there was no foul and awarded the fight to Johnson.

Billy McLean, son of the veteran boxing master of that name, is to make his first appearance in a public sparring contest on Wednesday evening, July 5. Him and Ed. Williams are to box four rounds at the rooms of the Union Athletic Chil.
Philadelphia. The young fellow has acquired much of his father's skill in the use of his bunches, and should give an excellent account of himself on thi occasion. The many friends of the senior 'Billy' will be pleased to know that he sail right north will be pleased to know that he is all right again after his paintul accident, and is once more also to attend to his professional duties, because of which the lovers of the art in the Quaker City are gener ally rejoiced.

GEORGE DIXON AND WALTER EDGERTON, better known as "The Kentucky Rosebud," a clever colored boxer, met at the Winter Circus, in Philadelphia, on the evening of July 1, and here is what The Philadelphia Press has to say about the contest, which was evidently very lively: "The first round was uneventful, but in the second the champion began to force matters, but was surprisingly wild. The 'Rosebud' developed a cheerful habit in guarding of putting his forcarm up against Dixon's throat in a way that was discouraging to the star. The fourth round was decidedly hot, and at its close the local aspirant, like 'Oht Glory,' was still there."

The first instalment of the annual races for the amateur championship of England, under the auspices of the National 'Cyclists' Union, took place at

The Case of Fiyer Johnson.

The Racing Board of the League of American Wheelmen on June 26 suspended John S. Johnson Wheelmen on June 20 suspended John S. Johnson and F. Howard Tuttle for a period of thirty days on a charge of "makers' amateurism." As Johnson was desirous of filling engagements he had made at meetings to be held in the States and Canada in the interim, he sought an audience with Chairman Raymond, and submitted affidavits in refutation of the charges made against him and Tuttle, who have been riding bleyeles manufactured at syracuse, N. Y. The evidence submitted decided Chairman Raymond to raise their suspension for a time, and he sent to each member of the Racing Board the following letter:

"EENTLEMES". In administering the affairs of this office we must be fair and impartial to each and every racing man we are called upon to investigate. Mesers, J. S. Johnson and F. H. Tuttle received at the hands of the Chairman a suspension, pending investigation as to their amateur status.

To prove their innocence both Mr. Johnson and Mr. Tuttle have submitted four affidavits, all tending to show their good stanting and compliance with the amateur rule. The promptness with which this proof has been submitted entities them to an absolutely fair and unbiased decision, and if there is to be a delay in the rendering of decision they should not be made to suffer while said decision is pending. Having done their part, and zent in their case, we should either render a decision and control by our own necessary acts in reaching said decision, therefore is hereby raised until July The engagement, therefore is hereby raised until July and F. Howard Tuttle for a period of thirty days on

The susponsion, therefore is berely raised until July 15, to permit of a mail vote being taxen of the entire Racing Board, at which time it will either be made permanent by a declaration of professionalism, or removed altogether. In the weantime, Mesers Johnson and Tutle may race as heretofore, and this manifesto is made tor that purpose. Atter July 15 the suspension will be in force, by which time we hope to settle the c. se once and for all.

Sanger Beats World's Records. The Sporting Life, of London, Eng., says that on June 19, at the Herne Hill track, W. C. Sanger, of Milwaukee, Wis., beat the flying quarter mile and mile records. The best previous flying 'Quarter' was made by himself two days previously at the same place, at the finish of the mile championship race, and stood at 285,8. This he lowered by a second doing 275,8s. He next had a cnt at A. W. Harris' 2m. 12°,8s. for a mile, made on Sept. 17, 1892, at the same ground. This record Sanger easily beat, doing 2m. 10°,8s., beating, en route, J. W. Scnofield's lin. 38°,8s. for three-quarters of a mile, made at Putney on Oct. 26, 1892, by 2°,8s. G. Pembroke-Coleman timed, while Lewis, Stroud, Good and U. L. Lambley paced. Sanger left London on the following day and sailed for home on the 21st, arriving last week. mile records. THE UNIVERSITY RACE.

Yale Again Defeats Harvard in the Annual Struggle.

The great rowing match of the season, the eight oared shell race between Yale and Harvard, was rowed June 30, on the Thames River. Slow time was made, but that was owing largely to stiff head winds and a choppy sea. New York and Boston were largely represented in the great throng of spectators. The course was the custom-ary four miles, straightaway, and, although the Harvards rowed a game race all the way through, they were beaten by the Yales by nearly four boat lengths, Yale covering the distance in 25m. 13/48. to Harvard's 25m. 15s. It was a good race from start to finish and very exciting for the first three miles. There may have been twelve thousand visitors present, and a brighter and more beautiful day could hardly be asked for. Fireworks, fog horns, flags, banners and bunting were brought into this quaint old seaside town, and the transformation scene was almost as great as holding a circus in a church. Never before in the recollection of the oldest inhabitants were so many yachts anchored inside New London Light.

The Yale boys got into their new paper bont at ion of the oldest inhabitants were so many yachts anchored inside New London Light.

The Yale boys got into their new paper boat at Gale's Ferry at 10.45 o'clock and started for the head of the course. It was 10.55 before the Harvards got into their sixty foot cedar shell at Red Top and pulled off for the Polly, which contained Referce George L. Rives, Judges Alfred Cowles and L. E. Sexton and Timekeepers George A. Adee and Nelson Perkins, also Bob Cook, Yale's coach.

A good start was made, but, as Harvard set a rattling fast pace of 40 stekes to the minute, she soon took a slight lead over Yale, which crew settled down to a steady gait of 36 strokes to the minute. The Harvards were about a second ahead when they reached the first half mile flag, but an obstacle arose about this time which threatened to break up the race. A stiff south wind made a choppy sea, and it was feared that the water would become so rough that it would swamp the boats, Fast time was impossible. Harvard was still in the lead when the mile flag was reached, but before the mile was finished Yale spurted enough to get her nose to the front. This advantage they never lost, but continued to slowly but surely forge ahead, until they were fully a length in the lead when they passed the two mile flag. The pace was a trifle too fast for Harvard, and she lowered her stroke to 38, and even then it was telling on them. Fearing, at No. 5, was showing signs of failigne, while Cummings, at No. 7, was pulling in poor form. The wind was strong and the water lumpy during the first half of the third mile, and speed was out of the question. The Yales increased their stroke from 34 to 36, and pulled as if their lives were a batt fag. The Friends of the Harvards gave up all hope at this point and ceased shouting. The Yales were pulling in the best form, although both could have done better had it not been for the stiff wind and rough water. The Yales were about eleven seconds ahead at the two and a hair mile flag. The Friends of the Harvards gave up all hope

The second event was a junior four oared gig race between the Appomattox and Virginia Clubs. The former won. The most important race was the senior four oared gig race between the Richmond College, Virginia and Appomattox Clubs. It was for the French Cup, valued at $500. The Richmond College crew won.

The Breeze Too Mild.

Light wind marred the pleasure of the yachtsmen who took part in the eighth annual regatta of the New Rochelle Yacht Club, which was sailed on Long Island Sound July 1. Had there been a good breeze it would have been a fine regatta, as thirty-eight yachts crossed the starting line. The start tras made shortly after 12 o'clock. The course for the larger boats was to Execution Light, thence Vale Beats Harvard and Columbia.

The second race of the series between college crews this year, the triangular struggle between the Freshmen of Yale, Harvard and Columbia came off on the Thames River, near New London came off on the Thrimes River, near New London, Ct., on Wednesday afternoon, June 28, and resulted in the victory of the youths from the Elm City, with Harvard a rather poor second, but well in frent of the New York lads. In fact the race was slimply no contest at all, so handly did Yale, an overwhelming favorite, row away from the others, making the affair an uninteresting procession. The winners fluished eight good kingths ahead, with plenty up their sleeves, in 10m. 23s., their time at intermediate distances being: Half mile, 2m. 15s.; one mile, 4m. 57s.; mile and a half, 7m. 30s. The names of the oarsmen composing the crews are given below: Tale—R. Armstrong (bow), A. C. Holcomb, W. M. Beard, A. W. Dater, J. H. Knapp, W. R. Cross, R. B. Treadway, W. D. Smith (stroke), J. W. Boies (coxawain). Average weight, 170h.

Harvard—F. M. Forbes (bow), J. S. Derby, J. Shea, H. S. Russell, F. Duffield, C. T. Rice, L. D. Sheaard, R. M. Townsend (stroke), E. P. Day (coxawain). Average weight, 188b.

Racing for the Plant Cup.

The regatta for the handsome cup offered by Vice Commodore Plant, of the Indian Harbor Yacht Club, was sailed on Monday, July 3, in fine racing weather. The start was made at 1 o'clock off the end of Great Captain's Island and the course was to end of Great Captain's Island and the course was to and around a budy off Centre Island, on the Long Island shore, and back to the starting line, a distance of thirteen miles. The wind was fresh from the east and the yachts went over the line on the port tack in this order: Wenonah, Myrtle, Oconee, Almira, Crocus, Nymph, Tabitha, Dosoris, Mary, and Caper. It was a close reach across the Sound. The Myrtle soon took the lead, and at the outer mark the order was Myrtle, Almira, Nymph and Oconee. After rounding the outer mark Oconee went to the front, and, finishing first, at 3.2511, won the race. Summary;

The Valkyrie Plays Second Fiddle. The Northern Yacht Club regatta on the Clyde on July 1 was not a very exciting affair, but much in terest was taken in the result because of the yachts engaged. There were five starters-the Prince of engaged. There were new starters—The Prince of Wales' Britannia. Lord Dunraven's Valkyrie, J. Jameson's Iverna, Peter Donaldson's Call'ma and A. D. Clarke's Satanita. The course was fifty miles. As the yachts crossed the line a fresh wind was blowing, but it soon died out. A dead calm followed, and the race developed into a drifting match. The Britannia, which was cleverly handled, came in first and won first prize. Her lime was 7h. 10m. 25s. The Satanita came in second, but the Valkyrie, which was third, won second prize on time allowance. The Calluna was last. The Iverna abandoned the race shortly after the wind died out.

The club held another race on the 3d, which was little better than the first, owing to the fact that the wind was so light the yachts did little more than drift over the greater part of the course, which was off Rothessy, Scotland. At the end of the first round the commodore of the club stopped the race and awarded the first prize to the Calluna, the Scotch cutter; the Valkyrie got second prize and the Satanita third prize. The Britannia, the Prince of Wales' boat, was fourth. Wales' Britannia, Lord Dunraven's Valkyrie, J

THE CRESCENT ATHLETIC CLUB held a regatta on Saturday, June 24, at Bay Ridge, L. I. The weather was fine, but the high wind made the water rough was fine, but the high wind made the water rough, and no time was taken. The winners: Senior single scull gigs—J. T. Hardy, E. B. Terry second. Single scull gig, novices—C. M. Blackman, H. C. McLeod second. Four oared gigs—A. D. Byrne (bow), J. T. Hardy, J. V. Lamarche, William Zaiss (stroke), F. H. Sayre (coxwain). Eight cared snelly—G. S. Otts (bow), F. R. Kellogg, H. L. Patteson, Frank Fanss, J. H. Bagg, G. Wallace, T. S. Perkins (stroke), Theo, R. Richard Jr. (coxwain). The racing over, the members and invited guests, among whom were the usual number of young ladies, enjoyed themselves socially at the club house.

Regatta in Canada.

The annual race for the Queen's Cup was sailed at Hamilton, Ont., July 1. The distance was twenat Hamilton, Ont., July 1. The distance was twenty-five miles, twice around a triangular twelve and a half mile course. The race was open to 40 footers. The contestants were the Zelina, of Toronto, aggle, of Oakville, and Dinah, of Hamilton. The wind blew light, and the afternoon was well over before the last yacht crossed the line, athough the start was made at ten o'clock in the morning. The Toronto yacht finished winner by half an hour, the Aggle second, with a good lead on the Dinah. The race was witnessed by about six thousand people.

THE schooler yacht Fleur De Lis, the property of George Trotter, sailed from this port on June 23 for Liverpool, from which place she will sail for the Norwegian coast, there to cruise for some time, it being the intention of her owner to make a two years' trip around the world.

History of New THOUSE A DE STEE THOM

During the past two years I have received many inquiries as to whether this work, which has appeared in the columns of THE NEW YORK CLIPPER, since March, 1885 (and will end about the latter part of the present month), covering a period of over five years, would be published in book form. I propose issuing in the Fall—provided I secure sufficient subscriptions—a limited edition in three volumes, of nearly 3.000 pages, large paper style, accompanied by a copious index. It will be printed with the utmost care and nicety, from new (pica) type, upon laid, water marked and toned paper, made especially for it, and be bound in unique cloth binding, with uncut edges. As this is the only authentic work ever published of THE NEW YORK THEATRES, from 1733 to 1893, and as these copies will be sold only by subscription, you will please send me your name at your convenience. Twenty dollars will be the subscription price.
